Hopkins Denies Politics Governs U.S. Relief Fund

Says Partisanship Was Not Involved in Recent Criticisms.

Suggests Kansas Change Its Laws

Announces End of Aid to 13 States After November.

By Felix Bruner.

Insisting that nothing he says is intended to have any political significance, Harry L. Hopkins, New Deal relief boss, pointed out yesterday that other States than Kansas had constitutional provisions preventing contributions to relief, but that they had changed their constitutions. He gave Texas as an example.

A week ago Hopkins declared that the State of Kansas had never contributed "one thin dime toward relief and that the Governor had not attempted to raise any money." The Governor is Alf M. Landon, frequently mentioned as a Republican presidential possibility.

Hopkins in making his original statement added that counties and local communities had contributed. Figures in his office showed that the people of Kansas had contributed in this way a higher percentage of money than had the people of 31 other States.

Discussing the Kansas situation yesterday, Hopkins said he had repeatedly suggested without success that the Kansas constitution be changed. Asked why he made a distinction between State and local contributions, Hopkins said that it was because the burden of taxation for local contributions falls entirely on real estate. He said he did not believe real estate owners should carry the entire load.

Opposes Sales Taxes.

At the same time Hopkins denounced retail sales taxes, adopted by more than a score of States largely for relief purposes.

"The sales tax is a tax on poor people, and I don't like it," he said. "Any other form of taxation would be acceptable."

"I was surprised to see the construction placed by newspapers on what I said about Kansas," Hopkins remarked. "I was surprised at the implication that the things I say have political significance."

Hopkins also referred to reports that relief money had been poured into Kentucky ahead of the election, denying that his organization had done anything to influence the outcome.

"This job, involving whether people eat or not, is a far too serious business for me to have politics in mind," he said. "No relief ever has been given or ever will be given on a political basis. The thing that I am interested in is to see that the

Soldier's Death Is Laid to Youth

Target Practice on Old Fort Belvoir Range Held Responsible.

A youth firing a gun on the old Fort Belvoir range was blamed by authorities at the military reservation last night for the fatal shooting of Technical Sergt. Clark H. Dewey, 42, of the Thirteenth Engineers.

Officials at the fort were making a secret inquiry into the shooting and declined to reveal further details except to say that the shooting was believed to have been accidental and that the youth who fired the shot was practicing with a group of friends.

The old range, now seldom used, is on the old Fort Belvoir road near Pohick, Va.

Dewey died in the fort hospital yesterday with a bullet wound in the neck. First word of his shooting came with his death, though one official source at Fort Belvoir said Dewey was wounded shortly before dark Wednesday.

It was learned that Dewey drove to his home on the reservation Wednesday, stopped the car and slumped over the wheel. He was helped into the house by his wife, a hostess at the fort service club and the mother of three children, and later removed to the hospital.

Infant Doris Koenig Dies After Scalding

Doris Koenig, 22-month-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John C. Koenig, died in Sibley Hospital yesterday after being scalded at her home, 2432 Fourth street northeast, Tuesday.

The child's father told police he had placed a tub of boiling water on the back porch while he went down the yard to close the gate. His daughter ran from the house and fell into the water, he said.

Broker Indicted

Jury Charges Embezzlement To Lowengrub

Linked to Two Suicides; Brother Is Cited Here by SEC.

Irving Lowengrub, 32-year-old broker and enigmatic figure in the background of the suicides of two young women who worked for him at different times, yesterday was indicted by the District grand jury for embezzlement and larceny after trust.

The indictment was returned on charges preferred by Dr. and Mrs. Charles E. Ferguson, of the 1400 block of Delafield place northwest.

Meanwhile, Lowengrub's brother, Perry, 34, was served by the Securities and Exchange Commission with an order requiring him to produce the books and papers relating to the conduct of the investment business he and his brother operated in the heart of Washington's financial district.

The arrest of Irving Lowengrub followed closely the suicide of pretty Mrs. Leona Epstein, 28-year-old divorcee, in an apartment she allegedly shared with Lowengrub at Connecticut avenue and Rodman street.

Before inhaling gas in her flat early last Sunday, Mrs. Epstein wrote two letters, one of which was addressed to District Attorney Leslie C. Garnett. When she laid aside her pen, she turned on the gas from several jets. Several hours after her death a terrific blast shook the apartment, the result of an electric spark from the automatic ice box igniting the fumes.

Shortly after the explosion, which threw the entire neighborhood into confusion, police began an investigation and arrested Lowengrub, then took his brother, Perry, into custody.

The charges under which the grand jury brought its indictment

Train Bandits Seize $40,000 In Ohio Raid

Machine Gunners Shoot Clerk; Townsmen Held at Bay.

Republic Steel Pay Roll Taken Third Time in a Year.

By the Associated Press.

Garrettsville, Ohio, Nov. 7.—A desperate gang of five machine-gun robbers, firing shots and shouting threats, raided an Erie Railroad passenger and mail train today, held at bay a dozen startled spectators, and escaped with mail pouches which officials said probably contained at least $40,000.

The gang waited until the train, bound from Cleveland to Pittsburgh, ground to a regular stop at the Garretisville station. Then one of them held up Earl Davis, a news dealer, who was waiting on the platform.

"At least four of them had machine guns," Davis said. "One of them fired a shot into the mail car and ordered the three clerks to come outside. A couple of the other robbers at the same time were holding up everyone on the station platform, and made them stand in line. Another robber, with gun in hand, forced Engineer Charles Shull and Fireman P. O. Leuschner out of the locomotive cab."

Bullet Hits Clerk.

One of the robbers, entering the mail car, fired a shot that grazed the forehead of Orlin Workman, a clerk. It raised a bump but did not seriously hurt him.

"They started shooting but stopped when we came out," said P. E. Christy, another clerk in the car.

As quickly as Workman, Christy and Steve Warren, a third clerk, left the car, the robber started throwing mail pouches out of the door, Davis said.

"Then they made me and Robert Brockett, a local mail carrier, carry seven pouches to their waiting automobile," he added. "In another minute the whole gang fled."

During the robbery, Mrs. W. L. Scott, of Garrettsville, walked onto the station platform. She was unaware that the holdup was in progress. One of the robbers pushed a machine gun against her back.

Threatens to Shoot.

"Get back against the station wall or I'll drill you," he shouted.

The robbers kept the train under their control for nearly ten minutes.

As the gang was fleeing, Christy got a glimpse of their auto license and reported the number to postoffice inspectors who hurried to the scene from district headquarters in Cleveland, about 40 miles away.

State highway patrolmen, sheriff's deputies and police also joined in the chase.

The estimate of the amount of loot came from the officials of the Cleveland Federal Reserve Bank. They said they believed the pouches contained a shipment of $34,000 for the Second National Bank of Warren, Ohio, $500 for a bank in Canfield, Ohio, and $5,000 for a bank in Girard, Ohio.

Steel Pay Roll Included.

The money for the Warren bank was for use in meeting a pay roll at the Republic Steel Corporation tomorrow.

Twice before in little more than a year there have been raids on the Republic pay roll money. In October, 1934, a gang held up two bank messengers as they were entering a Warren bank and escaped with $68,000. Two robbers last April robbed the driver of a mail truck at Warren of $72,000 also intended for Republic Steel.

None of the money obtained in the two previous robberies has been recovered.

Only two members of today's robbery gang took precautions to hide their features. One who appeared to be the leader wore a mask, Christy said. The others wore smoked glasses.

Storm Races For Florida's Western Coast

Gulf Hurricane Bears Down On Pensacola; 8 Already Dead in Week.

By the Associated Press.

Jacksonville, Fla., Nov. 7.—Forewarned, the Florida Gulf Coast today awaited a tropical storm which churned across the Gulf of Mexico after striking the southern part of the State earlier in the week with death-dealing fury.

A Weather Bureau advisory said the hurricane winds which have harassed the State since Monday, when eight were killed on the eastern coastline, were expected to strike again tonight east of Pensacola.

The Coast Guard stood by to lend a hand as the region made ready for the expected blow, moving fishing craft to safe anchorage in protected waters and boarding up waterfront property.

Highway engineers were sent from Tallahassee to Appalachicola to direct precautions against storm damage to a new $1,300,000 bridge across Appalachicola Bay. The structure is scheduled for formal opening Monday.

The advisory said the storm, believed to have lost some of its force, was headed toward the coast east of Pensacola and probably would cross near Appalachicola, attended by gales dangerous over a very small area near the center.

Tides above normal were indicated from Cedar Keys to Pensacola and caution was advised in this area.

Storm warnings were up from Pensacola to Cedar Keys with southeast storm warnings from Appalachicola to Panama City, and northeast storm warnings west of Panama City to Pensacola.

There was little indication during the early afternoon along the Florida and Alabama coasts of an approaching storm. Barometers generally were high and winds had not developed to strong proportions.

At Panama City the barometer stood at 30.05 at noon, then started a slow fall. Appalachicola's barometer at the same hour stood at 30.04, with a 9-mile wind from the southeast.

Port St. Joe, which reported clear weather during the morning, said the sky was overcast during the afternoon with southeast winds unofficially estimated at 15 to 20 miles an hour.

Five French Fliers Killed in Crash

Bomber in Terrific Blast En Route to Paris.

By the United Press.

Montpelier, Herault, France, Nov. 7.—Five French military aviators were killed today when their huge bombing plane crashed and exploded at Montarnaud, 6 miles from here.

The plane was en route to Paris from Toulouse, southern France.

Witnesses said the bomber was flying slowly when it went into a spin. It exploded violently the instant it hit the ground. Some of the fliers were dismembered. All were killed instantly. The wreckage was scattered hundreds of feet.

The dead included the commanding officer, Lieut. Marcel; the pilot, Adjutant Bertrand; navigator, Sergt. Kraemer; radio operator, Sergt. Minondat, and the mechanic, Sergt. Rousseau. Authorities believed the motor stalled.

Roosevelt Reaches N. Y., Goes to Town Home

New York, Nov. 7 (AP).—President Roosevelt and his party reached the New York City line at 5:15 today en route from Hyde Park to Washington, traveling by automobile.

The party headed for the President's town home. After dinner with officers of the Grand Lodge of New York Masons, the President planned to participate in ceremonies at Architect Lodge, Free and Accepted Masons, in which his two sons, James and Franklin, jr., were to be elevated to the rank of master Mason.

Premier King Here for Talk With Roosevelt

Canadian Prime Minister Refuses to Discuss Affairs of State.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Declining to discuss reciprocal trade agreements, St. Lawrence waterway treaties or any other affairs of state, William Lyon Mackenzie King, Liberal Prime Minister of Canada, arrived in Washington yesterday to spend the remainder of this week and perhaps part of next week.

In a chilly, driving rain, the Canadian premier arrived at Union Station shortly after noon to be accorded an official welcome and then to be swept off in a White House motor car to the Canadian Legation, where he remained last night preparatory to a round of official and social calls today, ending with an overnight visit to the White House.

President Roosevelt and Secretary of State Cordell Hull, both cutting short vacations from the capital, will return today to receive the distinguished visitor and to discuss with him how the relations between the two North American countries might be improved, primarily in the way of increased trade.

Dinner Planned Tonight.

President and Mrs. Roosevelt will entertain at an informal dinner in honor of Premier King this evening. Later President Roosevelt and the Canadian executive will sit in the oval room library on the second floor of the White House and informally discuss their mutual problems.

It will mark the first time in several generations that a Democratic President of the United States has had an opportunity to talk with a Liberal Prime Minister of Canada, because the sweeping victory of the Liberal Party in the Dominion on October 14 marked the first time in the memory of living men that it has achieved power at the same time that the Democrats were intrenched at Washington.

Whether the President and Premier King will undertake to reach any agreement, even on basic principles, regarding the reciprocal trade pact now being negotiated by experts of the two countries could not be learned yesterday. Undoubtedly they will discuss it. But it is not known whether any joint statement reciting common ground on which they stand will be issued tomorrow when the two executives part.

Task Called Difficult.

All familiar with the problem of negotiating this trade pact agree it is one of the most difficult tasks ever to face two nations and that if an agreement of any substance is effected it will constitute a remarkable achievement. This is not because of any unwillingness to negotiate nor is it because the aims and aspirations of the two countries are so far apart.

Indeed, the difficulty facing President Roosevelt and Premier King is due to the similarity of the trade and commercial aims of the two countries. Each must proceed with the public opinion of his country constantly in mind.

Thus Canada's crying need is for an expansion of agricultural exports—grains, live cattle, milk and cream and potatoes. The Dominion also would like to obtain outlets for its fish, copper and lumber. This country is producing a surplus of these commodities, which has held down their price level until recently.

Moreover, the producers of these commodities are among the most articulate of all the population in demanding that the Government help them, demands to which responses have been made recently through the imposition of excise taxes and AAA production control measures. With an election only a year off, President Roosevelt must give an attentive ear to these groups, some of them strongly organized.

The United States, on the other hand, would like to sell more manufactured commodities in Canada. But Premier King must give heed to the desires in this matter not only of the manufacturers in his own constituency but also to those of England under the Ottawa Empire agreements. Some steps to modify the latter must be taken before anything substantial can be done in the way of an American-Canadian reciprocal pact.

Italian Scouts Take Makale, Rome Is Told

No Resistance Met by Advancing Patrols of Invaders.

40 Ethiopians Reported Slain in Attempt to Ambush Askaris.

The Crisis Abroad.

Italian patrols were reported to have entered Makale without resistance.

In Rome it was reported the Italian advance beyond Makale will be confronted with the "Hindenburg line of Ethiopia."

On orders from Premier Mussolini, Italian authorities arrested and sentenced to exile war profiteers.

In Addis Ababa it was reported that Emperor Haile Selassie will fly to Harar next week and go south by truck to encourage his troops opposing the forces on Gen. Graziani. Later the Emperor will go to Dessye, farther north. The Crown Prince Asfao Wassan will act as head of the government in the Emperor's absence.

In Texas an Italian agent was understood to have offered $1.15 a barrel for 50,000,000 barrels of Texas crude oil.

By the United Press.

Rome, Nov. 7.—Italian scouting patrols entered Makale without resistance late today, semiofficial advices from the front said tonight. Officials believed it was only a matter of hours before the main columns of troops would make their "triumphal entry."

Official reports from Hauzien, about 50 miles north of Makale, said Ras Haile Selassie Gugsa's bands occupied the ridge between Makale and Dolo. Italian advance patrols already are proceeding south to Makale, reports said.

As a result of Ras Gugsa's occupation of the ridge, Makale now is dominated completely by Italian forces. Italian small-caliber guns have been brought within easy striking distance of the caravan center, and larger guns are posted within an effective range, it was reported.

With Gen. Santini's Column in Northern Ethiopia, Nov. 7.—The main column of Gen. Alessandro Pirzio-Biroli's Blackshirts and native Askaris drove 30 miles across the mountains today to the environs of Makale.

Paralleling this advance, the column of Gen. Ruggiero Santini thrust forward to a point slightly to the east of the caravan center.

The troops paused in those positions for the night, ready to close in upon Makale at dawn. The main columns joined advance patrols of Askaris already exploring the mountain ridges around the town.

Long lines of chugging scooter tanks flanked the advancing columns to guard against surprise attack. The Ethiopians are expected to resist occupation of Makale despite fluttering of white flags and other signals of submission from the inhabitants.

The Exchange Telegraph reported 40 Ethiopians were killed and 10 captured in an attempt to ambush advancing Askaris (native Italian troops) on wooded slopes of Amba Salana, southwest of Agula. Agula is about 15 miles northeast of Makale.

The Askaris replied to Ethiopian

Utility Act Ruled Unconstitutional By Federal Judge

Screen Star Threatened

THELMA TODD.

Suspect Held In Threat Sent Thelma Todd

Loved Her and Wanted to Give Her Publicity, Says New Yorker.

By the United Press.

New York, Nov. 7.—Police today announced the arrest by Department of Justice agents of Edward Schiffert, 28, as the man who several weeks ago threatened death to Thelma Todd, screen star, unless $20,000 was paid.

Schiffert, trapped by his persistent efforts to clear from suspicion the janitor of his apartment house, readily admitted writing the extortion letters, police said, but denied intent to harm the actress.

"I fell in love with her on the screen and wanted to make her prominent," police quoted Schiffert, who said he intended only to do Miss Todd a service by providing her with publicity.

He was arraigned before United States Commissioner Garret W. Cotter.

Schiffert was arrested in Times Square after a reporter for a New York newspaper had cajoled the suspect into meeting him. Weaving of the net which finally caught Schiffert was begun last September 4, after the arrest of Harry Schimanski, janitor of the apartment building where Schiffert lives.

A Department of Justice agent disguised as a postman made this arrest after extortion notes had been traced to the address. Schimanski, charged with writing some of the notes, is at liberty under $7,500 bail.

On September 4 a newspaper received a postcard stating there was a miscarriage of justice in the case of Schimanski; that he was innocent of sending the notes. The card was given to Government agents, but nothing came of it. Then the newspaper's editorial offices began receiving telephone calls from a man who insisted Schimanski was innocent. Attempts to trace the calls failed, but finally a reporter persuaded the caller to meet him in Times Square. They arranged a meeting place and signals by which they would recognize each other.

Department of Justice operatives were notified of the rendezvous and posted themselves. When Schiffert appeared and gave the signals described by the reporter, he was arrested.

Schiffert, who is a handy man at a drug store, offered no resistance and talked readily.

SEC Plans to Enforce 'Death Sentence' Despite Defeat.

'Flagrant Violation' Is Laid to Congress

Holding Company Told by Maryland Jurist to Ignore Law.

By Robert C. Albright.

A trenchantly worded opinion by a Baltimore Federal judge, holding invalid the entire Wheeler-Rayburn utility holding company act, yesterday left Washington officials staggering from the impact, but apparently determined to proceed with enforcement on all fronts.

Federal District Judge William C. Coleman ordered trustees of the American States Public Service Co. to treat the act as invalid and of no effect. In a 96-page decision, he charged Congress with "flagrant violation" of its powers, and asserted the holding company law is "unconstitutional in its entirety."

It was the first court test of the utility control law and its "death sentence" provisions. Repercussions were apparent at once in official Washington and in the stock marts. At the Securities and Exchange Commission it was said, however, informally that the opinion will in no sense slow down enforcement machinery. Chairman Frank R. McNinch of the Federal Power Commission said he did not believe power provisions of the act were affected.

Stocks Show Gain.

The New York Stock Exchange had closed for the day, but utility shares on San Francisco exchanges bounced upward from fractions to 3 points a sthe news reached the Coast. American Telephone & Telegraph stock brought 149, 3 points above the New York closing, while a similar advance was registered in Electric Bond & Share.

Coincident with the decision, Chairman John J. O'Connor, of the House Rules Committee, disclosed his group may resume its utility holding company lobby investigation next week, with Howard C. Hopson, directing head of the Associated Gas & Electric Co., on the witness stand. Investigators will seek to track down the source of funds used by A. G. & E. last session to fight the Wheeler-Rayburn bill, and quiz Hopson on his income.

Although it was said here that the Government cannot appeal yesterday's Baltimore decision to the Supreme Court, as it was not a party to the case, the opinion was generally expressed that the case will ultimately be carried to a Supreme Court showdown.

As litigation over New Deal laws continued to pile up, Attorney General Homer C. Cummings revealed that Solicitor General Stanley Reed on Monday will ask the Supreme Court to be heard orally in a Texas case test of Bankhead cotton act constitutionality, scheduled for Supreme Court hearing December 9.

Company Is Small.

The Baltimore Federal Court test of the utility holding company law was pressed by trustees of the American States Public Service Co., a small holding company operating in Delaware, Michigan, Indiana, Oregon, Montana, Idaho and California.

Contending that registration with the Securities and Exchange Commission would involve heavy costs, lay a severe burden on original owners and interfere with reorganization, Trustees J. B. Whiteworth and F. Donald Fenhagen, appointed to reorganize the company under bankruptcy laws, took their case to the Federal courts.

John W. Davis, Democratic Presidential nominee in 1924 and counsel for the Edison Electric Institute, entered the case in behalf of Dr. Ferd Lautenbach, a Baltimore dentist and small North American shareholder, challenging the law's constitutionality. Davis is one of a group of lawyers who have volunteered unofficial opinions on validity of New Deal legislation, acting on invitation of the American Liberty League.

Responding to charges by John J. Burns, chief counsel for the Securities and Exchange Commission, Judge Coleman, in Baltimore, ruled yesterday there was no collusion between Davis, James Piper, coun-

Query to Mrs. Roosevelt Leads to Liquor Arrest

Pine, Mo., Nov. 7 (AP).—Clayton Arnold was in the Poplar Bluff Jail tonight, a victim of feminine curiosity. The wives of this small Ozark community had been wondering for some time where the menfolk got their liquor. Finally they wrote "Mrs. F. D. Roosevelt, White House, Washington."

A revenue agent got Arnold. He is awaiting trial on a charge of possessing untaxed liquor.

Society Watches Wild Son Win As Steeplechasers Run in Mud

By Walter Haight,
A Staff Correspondent.

Pimlico Race Track, Md., Nov. 7. Weather conditions were at their worst for the one day in the turf year that "hoss racin'" in Maryland goes society. A cold, bleak atmosphere and a weeping sky greeted the field in the "Master of Foxhounds Steeplechase," but this caused nothing unusual for the entry of Mrs. Thomas H. Somerville, imported from her Virginia estate, Montpelier, scored the third annual victory for her colors in the gruelling 3-mile struggle over 19 brushes.

Having won two years in a row with Annapolis, Selby L. Burch, the Washington trainer, placed the hope of the racing establishment in the powerful legs and sturdy chest of Wild Son. The aged horse merely toyed with his opponents while being expertly handled by C. K. Bassett, who was riding his third straight winner of the event for gentlemen riders.

Wild Son, a $5.00 favorite, won by four lengths, only because Bassett chose not to make it a greater distance. He was easing up his mount going to the finish line ahead of Alvin Untermyer's Drapeau, which held a length advantage on R. V. N. Gambrell's Well Played.

Despite the soggy course, the long contest was marked by no serious mishap. Eight of the ten starters completed the course, with P. D. Reid drawing applause when he

Russia Hurls World Challenge On Anniversary of Revolution

By the Associated Press.

Moscow, Nov. 7.—Soviet Russia displayed its formidable military strength today in celebration of the eighteenth anniversary of the Red Revolution, while the government claimed a great improvement in its financial and trade situation.

Tanks, armored cars and field guns rattled over the stone pavement in Red Square as the army paraded before Joseph Stalin and other leaders of the U. S. S. R.

Klementi E. Voroshiloff, commissar for war and navy, in a speech delivered from horseback, warned of danger of a new world war, but declared the Red army was ready for any eventuality.

The commissar for foreign trade, A. Rosengoltz, announced reduction in the country's foreign indebtedness to approximately one-fourteenth of that of four years ago.

He declared in a public statement that nations that want to trade with Russia from now on will have to meet Soviet terms as to credit arrangements.

Countries in which the Soviet refusal to pay debts of the czarist regime brought opposition to proposals for loans to the U. S. S. R., Rosengoltz said, were gradually swinging to acceptance of the Soviet viewpoint. The United States was one of the nations which refused a direct loan to Russia.

"Capitalistic countries interested in the Soviet market and development of economic relations with the U. S. S. R. have begun to realize it is necessary to grant us long-term financial credits or loans," Rosengoltz declared.

He stated that at the beginning sel for the trustees; Ralph P. Beull, attorney for Burco, Inc., who defended the act, and William Le Rawls, attorney for American States Pubic Service Co., according to Associated Press.

In his sweeping decision, Judge Coleman held the act violated the commerce clause of the Constitution, a sits application could not be restricted to companies operating only in interstate commerce. At the same time, he said, there was invalid use of the postal powers in denying the mails to companies not co-operating under the act. He said many provisions of the act were "arbitrary" and violated "due process of law" guarantees in the fifth Constitutional Amendment.

What effect the decision would have on registrations of utility holding companies with the Securities and Exchange Commission was a matter of speculation. Under the act, they are required to register by December 1, three weeks hence, but some are said to have been advised by counsel not to comply, even before the Coleman opinion was handed down.

Only one small company has registered to date. Rumors have been received here that the Associated Gas & Electric Co., whose chief, Hopson, fought the act every inch of its troublous journey through Congress, intends to comply. Ironically enough, two of Hopson's A. G. E. subsidiary companies were the first to file an application under the act—for approval of sale of properties and franchises.

Between You and Me

Food Prices Fall—On U. S. Bureau's Paper; Hoffman Unimpressive; Utah Baffled.

By Raymond Clapper

COINCIDENT with the housewife's lament over the rising cost of food, the Bureau of Labor Statistics has quietly juggled its statistical base so that current high prices don't look so bad in the index figures.

This change was made October 24, but it was eased over so quietly that it practically escaped notice. So today the index of retail food prices stands at 80.5 instead of 127.8, which would have been the case on the basis used until two weeks ago. You'll have to admit that it looks much better on paper when figured out the new way.

All that was done to discard the 1913 basis of comparison which has been used since 1921 and to substitute the 1923-25 prices as the basis of comparison. Food prices were much higher between 1923 and 1925 than before the war so that by comparison with the more recent period, present prices seem low.

Some persons will suspect there was a political motive in this. But Commissioner Lubin, of the Bureau of Labor Statistics, says himself that the reason for the change was to put the retail food index on the same basis as factory employment and pay roll figures of the bureau and with Reserve Board and Department of Commerce indices which are on the 1923-25 base. They knew all the time that different bases were being used, But you know how it is, everybody was so busy that they just didn't get around to doing anything about it until the other day.

Gov. Hoffman of New Jersey was an added starter at the Cleveland dinner, where Gov. Landon of Kansas made his first important speech since he became a first-string Republican presidential prospect. When Landon accepted the invitation, and with great reluctance, he thought he was to be the only speaker of national prominence. Three days before the dinner he was advised that Hoffman, another presidential aspirant, would share the program with him.

Private report of an unbiased eye-witness at the Cleveland dinner:

"Landon made a good impression, but his speech was rather stuffy compared to his private interviews during the day. Business men who saw him in his room were impressed with his charm and sincerity and the fact that he did not claim to know all the answers. In his public appearance he seemed to be under wraps.

"Hoffman undoubtedly impressed some of the dumber clucks among the businessmen because he delivered a screaming oration full of all the cliches dear to their hearts, including a few wisecracks and a lot of tripe about the Constitution. He made a very sour impression upon those whose opinions are likely to count."

Political Parade: The height of nonchalance was the way Henry P. Fletcher, Republican national chairman, left Republican headquarters here just as the Kentucky election returns began coming in and went out to Burning Tree Club for an afternoon of golf . . . Former Senator James E. Watson, of Indiana, is playing king-maker again. He is trying for an uninstructed Republican delegation in Indiana with which to sit in the 1936 national convention poker game . . . Three vacancies in the House of Representatives were filled in this week's elections. One in Kentucky returned a Democrat, who was unopposed despite the fact that his predecessor won by only a small majority. Two Democrats were elected in New York City by larger margins than their predecessors . . . The height of irony was Taxpayer Franklin D. Roosevelt, hailing the election of a Democratic supervisor in Hyde Park and saying that it meant they would get greater efficiency and savings to the taxpayer. If he's going to be that good, Mr. Roosevelt ought to bring him to Washington, where the opportunity would be greater.

The Democratic National Committee is suffering from a slight case of embarrassment in Utah where Democrats have been trying to bounce their national committeeman, Orman W. Ewing, who lives in Washington. The State convention elected A. S. Brown but the Democratic National Committee here has failed to recognize him. A few days ago W. Forbes Morgan, Democratic national treasurer, wrote Brown asking him to raise $4,000 for the party deficit, and, so it is reported, apparently intimating that if everything went all right he would be recognized as national committeeman. Ewing heard heard about it and now wants to know what the committee did with the $4,700 he raised for it in 1933. He thinks the committee is trying to strike Utah Democrats for a double contribution.

Later New Jersey figures correct the earlier picture in one respect. Mayor Frank Hague of Jersey City, State Democratic boss, turned out a record plurality of 170,000 for Democratic assemblymen. With a plurality of 117,000 in 1932, Hague carried the State for Roosevelt by 30,000. But this year the Republicans mustered a record vote also and final figures show that on a Statewide basis, the Republicans topped the total Democratic vote by some 27,000.

If Congressional Treasury raiders go after him this winter, Secretary of Treasury Morgenthau can barricade himself inside his office and hold out indefinitely against a legislative siege. He has just installed, in an interoom, a kitchenette with a combination refrigerator and electric range.

There is considerable interest in PWA over an application from Palo Alto, Calif., for a gift of $4,500 to extend and improve its gas works. This is taken here as one more indication that Mr. Hoover is preparing to try for a political comeback.

Finding that the voters have no inclination to shoot Santta Claus, President Roosevelt is becoming bolder at Hyde Park. He is going into the business of raising Christmas trees for profit.

An eminent legal authority, whose weakness for puns is to be forgiven in this instance, has figured out what is behind the sudden NRA activity of Maj. George Berry. He says that in view of the fact that the Supreme Court killed NRA, Mr. Roosevelt has decided to Berry it.

They were all placed under $5,000 in each charge for a hearing before Turnage, November 14. Hopkins Urges Kansas Change Law on Relief Suggests Amendment That Would Enable State to Give Aid.

No Politics Allowed.

"This office is not in politics and politicians can yell their heads off if they want to. This is a serious business. I would betray every trust the Government puts in me if I should allow things to go in a political direction. If things I say are interpreted that way, I can't help it. But politics is not the motivation of this office."

Hopkins repeated that the Kansas State government had made no contribution except a small one for administrative expenses.

"Local communities have taken it on the chin," he said.

Discussing real estate taxes, Hopkins said that "we will have this burden for a long time to come," and that he did not believe real estate should continue to bear it.

Analyzes Relief Costs.

Asked concerning the charge made by the Republican national committee that no one except Democrats had been employed in relief administrative offices in Missouri, Hopkins dismissed it by saying that it "came from a political source."

In an article in Collier's today Hopkins says that work relief costs twice as much—per person aided—as direct relief. He estimates that the man-year cost of employment is $1,800, or $36 per week per man. This is about $700 more than the limit fixed by President Roosevelt for the present program.

Attacking public works, as contrasted with the type of "made work" being done by WPA, Hopkins says:

"Public works simply can't do the job. They can't do the job that we have pledged ourselves to do, at least not with $4,000,000,000. It would take close to $20,000,000,000, and even this would not give jobs to garment workers, waitresses, chauffeurs, the professions and the whole unhappy white-collar class."

Discusses Pauperism.

Speaking again of direct relief, the article says:

"Of course it would be cheaper in terms of money! Cheaper in all probability by 50 per cent, but when you count it up in terms of pride, courage, self-respect, ambition and energy, a direct relief program is a thousand times more costly than a work program, for it tends inevitably toward the creation of a permanent pauper class, hopeless and helpless and an increasing and crushing weight on the backs of the gainfully employed."

Hopkins expressed the belief that even with prosperous business between 5,000,000 and 6,000,000 persons would be unemployed.

Meanwhile, Hopkins announced that he had informed four more States that their direct relief allotments for November would be the last they would receive. The States are Rhode Island, Georgia, Iowa and New Mexico. This brings the total off direct relief to 13.

Explains Nov. 1 Order.

Hopkins said the reason an order was recently issued providing that employment would be given to no one going on relief rolls after November 1 was that in a few instances relief agencies had been deliberately adding people to their rolls to get them jobs.

Secretary Ickes announced that of PWA bond issues voted on in 29 States, 162 had been approved and 21 rejected. These bonds are to pay the communities' 55 per cent share of PWA construction costs.

Ickes also made public a letter to James L. Key, Mayor of Atlanta, in which he suggested that the Government pay the city for service such as fire and police protection, sewers, etc., in lieu of payment of taxes on Federal housing. Objection has been raised in a number of places that the Government housing projects, nontaxable, would cut into revenues of communities in which they are built. Ickes said special legislation to permit the service charge payments would be asked.

College Heads Fight New Danville Street

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Danville, Va., November 7.—Danville officials have referred to the city attorney a dispute which has arisen with the officials of Averett College who have offered objection to plays for a street through the rear end of the property. The street would connect a populous residential section with a new school. The city engineer claims provision is included for the street under the terms of annexation, but the college officials claim they purchased the land with no such understanding and that their deed fails to show it.

2 Men Dismissed On Account of Age

Third Employe Retained by Maryland Board.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Nov. —The State employment commissioner today upheld the dismissal of two Conservation Commission employes on grounds of old age, but ordered that a third man dismissed for the same reason be retained for at least a year.

The employes whose dismissals were upheld were Edward T. Justice, 74, and R. E. Purnell, 71, both of Crisfield. Col. Harry C. Jones, the employment commissioner, ordered, however, that Capt. Oden Rogers, of Anne Arundel County, be retained. Capt. Rogers is 67.

Col. Jones also ordered that the Conservation Commission make a special report on Rogers' efficiency next year.

The employment commissioner held that the age of Justice and Purnell hampered their activities.

Maryland has no pension system and the two aged men must look to the General Assembly for any aid in that respect.

Italian Scouts Seize Makale, Army Is Told

Advance Guard Crosses Mountains; 40 Ethiopians Die in Fight.

fire with machine guns but routed the Ethiopians only after repeated charges with bayonets.

Torrential downpours had reduced roads to trails and trails to quagmires, introducing a hazard unforeseen at this season. Motor trucks were stalled hub deep in the slippery mud. Roads behind the lines, which normally would have carried heavy traffic, were a foot deep in jungle mud.

Many Pack Mules Die.

The trucks were abandoned and supplies loaded on the backs of hundreds of pack mules. Many were loaded so heavily their flesh was galled raw. Many died, leaving the trail strewn with carcasses, some of which floated down the swollen torrents.

The soldiers advanced singing and cheerful despite hardtack and coffee rations dropped by parachute to the advanced parties. Thousands of sacks of flour were drenched and hardened like cement.

Water beat through the thin tents and flowed under the blankets. The troops were given cloth cloaks to shield them against the rain and chill, but within a few moments these were sopping wet.

Advance Guard Starts.

Santini's advance guard started approximately 16 miles from Makale. This force is composed of Gen. Somma's Black Shirts of the October 28 division and Askaris. This force also includes Ras Haile Selassie Gugsa's white-robed bodyguard. Somma's Black Shirts include volunteers between 40 and 55. Many fought in the World War and some participated in Mussolini's march on Rome.

Because of delays in supplies the troops are buying chickens and corn from the natives. The troops sing as they eat. Gen. Mosconi plays the guitar while the men in the tents take up the refrain.

The Italians have greatly impressed natives of the occupied areas by paying for foodstuffs.

Amazed by Watches.

At first the Ethiopians were skeptical. They even refused Italian money until it was accompanied by boxes of matches. The tribesmen were amazed and delighted to produce fire by scratching sticks on the side of the boxes. They willing exchange produce for matches and then use up the whole box just to see the fire. Empty wine bottles also were accepted in barter.

Artillery was dragged to strategic positions commanding the cluster of mud huts that is Makale.

Makale probably will fall tomorrow. The intention is to consolidate a new advanced line from Makale to the River Takkaze.

Conditions indicate there will be considerable pause for fortification and road building before the Italians move forward toward Lake Ashangi, from which a broad highway extends 250 miles into the Ethiopian capital.

Troop Movements Reported.

Capt. Galeazzo Ciano's observation squadrons report heavy movements of troops south of Makale, and it is believed the defending forces are preparing for a stand at Amba Alagi, halfway between Makale and Lake Ashangi.

Santini's force operated in close conjunction with the Blackshirts and Askaris under Gen. Alessandro Pirzio-Biroli to the right. Both columns are moving along ancient caravan trails which wind irregularly among the mountains and which never have borne a wheeled vehicle.

The Biroli column has embraced Hauzien, center of five radiating trails.

Chiefs and priests of villages along the way continue to offer capitulation to the Italians, who immediately abolish taxation and slavery.

Ethiopians 'Dig In'

Copyright, 1935, by the United Press.

Rome, Nov. 7.—The Italian advance beyond Makale will be confronted with the "Hindenburg line of Ethiopia," reports to foreign military attaches said tonight.

At Alagi, 40 miles south of Makale, the Ethiopians have fortified the mountain range with trenches, dugouts, bomb-proof shelters, machine gun nests, barbed wire entanglements and artillery.

They are reported preparing to make a "do-or-die" stand to bar Italian progress toward Lake Ashangi and the beginning of the highway to Dessye and Addis Ababa.

This highway is the admitted next objective of the Italian northern armies after the Makale-Takkaze River line has been consolidated.

A pause is expected after the fall of Makale while roads are extended to the new front line and aviators bombard the Alagi area.

Itlian cavalry is understood to be seeking a route through the marshlands of astern Danakil near the French Somaliland border to permit tanks to drive from Mussa Ali toward the Djibouti-Addis Ababa railroad. With the lifting of the arms embargo in favor of Ethiopia, cutting the railroad has become increasingly important.

The Somaliland campaign is beginning to be called "Gen. Graziani's secret." For several days the only report of progress in the Ogaden (Southern Ethiopia) region has been the brief statement that gains continue.

It is believed the general line of attack in the south includes aerial bombardment followed by advance of tanks and mixed units of white and native infantry. The Somaliland forces aim at moving up the Webbe Shibeli and Fafan valleys to meet the main body of the Ethiopians near Jijiga.

were that Dr. Ferguson had given him $2,464 to invest for him, and that he never had seen the money again.

Lowengrub countered that the funds had been given him for use in playing the stock market.

In her note, which started the police investigation, however, Mrs. Epstein depicted inner workings of Lowengrub's business. On the strength of this note Ferguson and his wife were called upon to tell their stories before the grand jury, and what they told, plus the contents of the letter, led to the indictment.

Stenographer Suicide.

In the course of their investigation Tuesday and Wednesday, police revealed that Miss Billy Hopkins, young stenographer for the firm, committed suicide by swallowing a slow-acting poison about six weeks ago.

She wrote a short, affectionate note to Irving Lowengrub, and before she died, a week later, in Emergency Hospital, she told officials she had no desire to live. From Huntington, W. Va., Wednesday Miss Hopkins' mother wired that she was certain her daughter had been murdered to keep knowledge of the financial transactions from the police.

Officials here shrugged at the idea, however, and pointed to the verdict of Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald, and to the dying girls' statements that she sought to take her own life.

Officials of the Washington Exchange Commission yesterday refused to reveal what they expected to uncover through a minute examination of the books of the Lowengrubs.

Perry Lowengrub was served with the papers at police headquarters just after he had been released from jail, where he was held with his brother.

Kentucky Vote Gives Chandler 71,935 Margin

Gov.-Elect Pledges End of Sales Tax; Repeal Wins in Landslide.

By the Associated Press.

Louisville, Ky., Nov. 7.—Elected Governor of Kentucky by a Democratic landslide majority, A. B. Chandler, beaming the smile that gave him the nickname "Happy," reiterated today his promises to repeal the State sales tax, cut governmental costs and "uphold the hands" of President Roosevelt.

As returns from 2,413 of the State's 4,219 precincts boosted Chandler's lead to 71,935, his Republican opponent, King Swope, conceded defeat. The vote was: Chandler, 332,219, and Swope, 260,284. Final returns were expected to give Chandler a record majority since reconstruction days in a State race.

Kentuckians by large margins amended their constitution to permit old-age pensions, repealed the 16-year-old State prohibition amendment and elected a Democratic Legislature. The vote, with 2,075 precincts tabulated, was 209,193 to 33,734 for old-age pensions. The vote, with 2,248 precincts in, was 214,648 in favor of and 178,191 against repeal.

"No High Hats at Inaugural."

Coming here from his Versailles home, where with his pretty wife and four children he heard the returns, the 37-year-old lieutenant governor planned a "people's inauguration" at Frankfort next month. Chandler said he and Lieut. Gov.-elect Keen Jehnson, young Richmond publisher, who with the rest of the Democratic ticket was swept into office, agreed "there will not be any high hats or striped pants for us."

Gov.-elect Chandler prepared to map out his program to reorganize the State government along more economical lines. As his model, he took the Virginia plan under Gov. Harry F. Byrd. He announced he would appoint a commission to study and recommend changes in government. Fewer State agencies, he said, would effect a saving of $1,000,000 annually. He said he would put the State on a pay-as-you-go basis.

Laffoon Vanquished.

A militant foe of the sales tax championed by Gov. Ruby Laffoon, Chandler, demanding repeal of the law, overcame Laffoon's powerful organization in the Democratic primary by defeating Thomas S. Rhea. Rhea and Laffoon bolted the head of the ticket but failed to stop the vote-getting drive of the smiling, handshaking Chandler, who told of his fight against poverty to gain an education.

"Please accept my cordial congratulations on your election," Judge Swope telegraphed Chandler at Democratic headquarters here. In a statement at Lexington, Swope said:

"I made a clean, hard fight for economy and decency in government and what I conceive to be the proper approache to the problems of Kentucky, making no promises impossible of performance or any assertions I was not prepared to prove."

He said he "cheerfully" accepted the outcome of Tuesday's election.

Swope, who campaigned on State issues, refrained from discussion of national questions. Enthusiastic in his praise of Roosevelt, Chandler contended Swope's election "would be a step back to Hooverism" and charged that despite Swope's silence Republican national leaders concentrated on Kentucky to win the governorship and hail a Republican victory as a slap at the New Deal.

of 1935 the Soviet foreign indebtedness was onlyq 139,000,000 rubles, compared with 1,400,000,000 in 1931, and promised that by the end of 1935 it would be reduced to 100,000,000 or 12,000,000 rubles.

He asserted 270,000,000 rubles in gold and other precious metals had been attracted to the government from within the country during the four-year operation of the "Torgsin" stores.

These stores—which accept only precious metals and foreign currency in payment for choice clothing, groceries and other necessaries—have practically served their purpose, Rosengoltz said, and will soon restrict their operations to dealings on the basis of money remittances from abroad.

He said the favorable trade balance of the U. S. S. R. at the end of 1935 probably would total 120,000,000 rubles. Last year the favorable balance was 186,000,000, and in 1931, there was an unfavorable balance of 293,000,000.

The foreign trade commissar also creased its gold output to the extent pointed out that Russia had in that it is now led only by South Africa.

The Communist Internationale's executive committe issued an appeal to workers in countries throughout the world to join in forcing an end to the Italo-Ethiopian war, to protect China from invasion by Japan, prevent a European war and destroy fascism.

It stated: "The peoples of the world are thirsty for freedom from the yoke of capitalism. They are against imperialistic wars. They will never become reconciled to fascism."

It suggested that "proletarian masses of the world" should "follow the example of the workers of Russia who succeeded in overthrowing capitalism and establishing the Soviet power."

The Soviet Union's frontiers in the Far East and in Europe were guarded today by soldiers and officers wearing decoratoins of valor, as a part of the observance of the revolution's anniversary.

Russia also looked proudly at its "first Soviet generation—born in the first year after the revolution—50,000 of whom paraded in Moscow last night.

Huge Operetta Leads List of Theater Bills

'Great Waltz,' at National, Will Rival New Films Next Week.

Reprinted From Yesterday's Last Edition.

"The Great Waltz," the most imposing musical production of modern times, will be the attraction at the National Theater for the week beginning next Monday night. With a cast of 150 and an augmented orchestra, this Max Gordon production will be presented in its entirety, exactly as offered during its sensational run in the Center Theater, New York. The operetta is based on the lives of the Strausses, father and son, and the score is made up of Stauss compositions. The customary matinees will be given on Wednesday and Saturday. The box-office seat sale opens this morning.

Lawrence Tibbett returns to the local screen tomorrow as star of "Metropolitan," the new Twentieth Century-Fox production announced as chief screen feature for the new week at the Warner Brothers Earle Theater. Supporting the star are Virginia Bruce, Luis Alberni, George Marion, sr., Cesar Romero, Alice Brady, Thurston Hall, Jessie Ralph and scores more. "Metropolitan" is a romantic comedy-drama with a background of grand opera that affords Tibbett ample opportunity to sing his favorite arias, ballads and spirituals. The stage portion of the program will be co-headlined by Cardini, prestidigitator, and Cass, Mack, Owen and Topsy, acrobatic comedians.

• • • •

For the week beginning tomorrow at Loew's Palace Theater, the chief feature of the bill will be "Barbary Coast," the Samuel Goldwyn production for United Artists in which the principal roles are played by Miriam Hopkins, Edward G. Robinson and Joel McCrea. A strong supporting cast appears with the stars in this colorful picturization of the gold rush days in California. The scene of the play is San Francisco and the time, the wild and woolly days that witnessed the formation of the "Vigilantes." The chief auxiliary will be a new Laurel and Hardy two-reel comedy. Short reels and Metrotone News will complete the program.

Edward Arnold returns to the screen at RKO-Keith's tomorrow in "Remember Last Night?" a new Universal release, described as a mystery-drama of baffling content and development. The story concerns the predicament in which a house party finds itself when one of its number is found murdered and no one is able to say how the death came about. Supporting the star will be seen Constance Cummings, Sally Eilers, Robert Armstrong, Louise Henry, Robert Young and Gregaory Ratoff. The bill will be completed by short reels and the Pathe News.

• • • •

William Powell and Rosalind Russell are the co-stellar performers in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's production of "Rendezvous," opening tomorrow as chief screen feature for the week at Loew's Fox Theater. Supporting the principal players are Binnie Barnes, Lionel Atwill, Cesar Romero, Samuel Hinds, Henry Stephenson and Charles Grapewin. The story concerns spy plots and the deciphering of secret codes during the World War. The stage bill for the new week will be headlined by Benny Rubin, stage, screen and radio star. Harry Rose, Ann Greenway and the Harris Twins also are on the vaudeville bill.

• • • •

"The Strauss Waltz," starring Jessie Mathews, will be the featured screen attraction at the Belasco Theater for the week beginning tomorrow. As the title suggests, the story is a romantic version of the life of Johann Strauss, the composer. The supporting cast is led by Edmund Gwenn, recently seen on the same screen in "Java Head," and Fay Compton. The bill will be rounded out by abbreviated camera subjects and a new issue of the Pathe News.

• • • •

"The Virginia Judge," adapted from his famous vaudeville act, will bring Walter C. Kelly to the screen of the Metropolitan Theater for the week beginning tomorrow. Among the supporting players in this tale of nearby Virginia life are Marsha Hunt, Johnny Downs, Robert Cummings and Stepin Fetchit. The picture was written by Octavus Roy Cohen. Selected short subjects and a full, 15-minute newsreel will complete the entertainment.

• • • •

Loew's Columbia Theater will present for a repeat F street engagement beginning tomorrow, Joan Crawford's latest hit, "I Live My Life," in which the foremost male role is played by Brian Aherne. Frank Morgan, Eric Blore, Arthur Treacher and Jessie Ralph are prominent in the supporting company. Short subjects and newsreel will augment the bill.

• • • •

"Night Flight," an exciting screen drama dealing with the blazing of airmail routes over the South American Andes, will be the major attraction at the Little Theater for the remainder of the current week, beginning today. Clark Gable, Helen Hayes, Robert Montgomery, Myrna Loy and John Lionel Barrymore head the cast.

• • • •

"Pace Makers" is the title borne by the burlesque attraction scheduled to open a week's engagement at the Gayety Theater with the usual matinee performance on Sunday afternoon. Heading the cast are Max Coleman, Al Hillier, Wen Miller, Jimmie Walters, Sally O'Day, Billie Hughes, Diane Johnson and Viola Spaeth. An attractive chorus supports the principals.

On The Air Today

Dr. Walter Damrosch will present the third concert of the Music Appreciation Hour today (WMAL at 11). The first half of the program will deal with the Fugue, using as examples several compositions by Bach. The second half will feature an all-Handel program.

• • • •

When the National Cornhusking Contest or "corn belt derby" gets under way on a farm in Indiana today, the National Farm and Home Hour microphone will be on the scene to relay a running account of the match over WMAL at 12:30. Hall Totten, veteran sports announcer, and Everett Mitchell, master of ceremonies on the Farm and Home Hour, will collaborate in describing the activities. Contestants will be 18 huskers, representing the champions and runners-up of Minnesota, Missouri, Kansas, Nebraska, South Dakota, Iowa, Illinois and Ohio. Last year this unusual sport event attracted 70,000 spectators.

• • • •

There will be a machine-gun bank robbery, a thrilling courtroom escape, and an exciting pursuit of a band of desperadoes—and of course, romance—in Irene Rich's starring vehicle (WMAL at 8). It sounds like a full quarter hour.

• • • •

John Harvard Day, celebrating the beginning of the 300th year since the founding of Harvard University and the 328th birthday of John Harvard, will be observed with a special broadcast (WRC at 8). The program will be heard during the usual time of the Cities Service hour, which has relinquished its broadcast in order that the Harvard celebration might be heard.

• • • •

Reinald Werrenrath, baritone, will be guest host of "The Flying Red Horse Tavern" (WJSV at 8). It will be "football night," and as a tribute to the late Notre Dame coach Freddie Rich's Orchestra will offer a special arrangement of Ferde Grofe's "Life of Knute Rockne." Others on the program will be Barbara Weeks, Sidney Smith and William Johnston.

• • • •

Carmela Ponselle, just back from a brief engagement with the Manhattan Opera Co., again will be headliner of the Broadway Varieties (WJSV at 8:30). Oscar Shaw and Elizabeth Lennox will be on hand as usual, singing several duets.

• • • •

The Beauty Box Theater (WMAL at 9) will present James Melton and Rose Bampton in Franz Lehar's fanciful operetta, "The Land of Smiles." Most of the songs from this piece are familiar—notably "Yours Is My Heart Alone" and "A Cup of Tea."

• • • •

Barbara Stanwyck will be Dick Powell's guest in "Hollywood Hotel" (WJSV at 9). Supported by the up and coming Preston Foster, Miss Stanwyck will preview scenes from her new picture, "Annie Oakley." Annie, as we remember it, could outshoot Buffalo Bill himself and often did.

• • • •

Betty Lou Gerson, young dramatic star, will make her debut as the leading lady of the First Nighter program, playing opposite Don Ameche (WRC at 10), in the role of an inspiring young actress in a play called "Luncheon for Two." Incidentally, the First Nighter program is the oldest continuous dramatic show on the air waves today—this week marking its 256th weekly performance.

• • • •

Fielding "Hurry Up" Yost, athletic director at the University of Michigan and head football coach at the institution from 1901 to 1927, will be heard during the Campus Revue as guest of Hal Totten (WRC at 10:30). The musical portion of the program will be handled by the Mills Brothers and Art Kassel and his Kassels in the Air Orchestra.

The Federal Diary

Registered in U. S. Patent Office.

By Morgan Baker.

Reprinted From Yesterday's Last Edition.

A SERIES of examinations for which applications closed Monday are pointed to by R. Claude Babcock, president of the American Federation of Government Employes, as illustrating the importance of a better balance in the Civil Service Commission with respect to the value of practical training as opposed to educational qualifications.

BAKER.

These examinations, for special writers in the Children's Bureau, set up educational qualifications which could not be met, Mr. Babcock contends, by many newspaper men and women, publicists, or writers for magazines. In the first place, he points out, many college graduates who have attained high positions in journalism and allied occupations would be barred from the examinations, for one of the requirements is that major work in college must have been in journalism, English or the social sciences.

"The requirement that the newspaper work in connection with experience, must have been with a newspaper having a circulation of 50,000 would bar many distinguished small-city journalists, such, perhaps as Ed Howe and Sherwood Anderson, and very probably would have barred Mark Twain and Eugene Field," Mr. Babcock said. "I think it very probable that 80 per cent of the Washington correspondents entitled to admittance to the House and Senate Press galleries would be barred by one or another of the requirements in this examination for $2,600 and $3,200 jobs."

Mr. Babcock added that the policy of the Civil Service Commission, of which he was recently secretary, has been to strike a balance between the duties, prerequisites and salary of a job, and that these restrictions throw the program out of balance. Apparently, he said, it is the purpose of the commission to restrict the number of applications, so that fewer persons will compete for jobs and fewer papers will be marked; but this policy, he contends, the commission cannot properly institute, since its task is to find the best qualified persons to fill a job or set of jobs, not to make work for its own employes easier.

Foreman Position Open.

Applications will be received until November 21 for the position of foreman of public works at the Norfolk Navy Yard, Portsmouth, Va., it is announced by Civil Service Commission.

Applicants must have had at least five years' experience in general construction work, preferably in one of the recognized building trades, and, in addition, must have had at least two years of supervisory experience of a high order on general construction work, including supervision of the several building trades, or a like period in responsible charge of building construction and/or plant maintenance work in a large industrial establishment. Individual contractors working on small residences, or custodians of small or unimportant buildings or establishments, will not be rated eligible under these requirements. Applicants are desired who have completed a college course in civil engineering, architectural engineering or architecture, and appropriate credit will be given for education in such subjects when shown.

Additional information may be obtained at the Civil Service Commission, Seventh and F streets northwest.

The Federation of Federal Architects, Engineers, Chemists and Technicians will hear Eugene A. Dubin speak on "Conflicts of Professional vs. Employe Status" at 8 p. m. today at 810 F street northwest. A chairman for the federation's educational committee will be elected tonight.

Beauty Secret Is Discovered On Paris Trip

Real Renovation for Skin Is Assured by Mask Treatment.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

WHEN A CERTAIN young Washington beauty culturist sojourned in Paris this fall, it was not to visit the Eiffel Tower, the Louvre, nor the tomb of of Napoleon. It was to seek a certain mysterious preparation of which he had heard exciting rumors. After weeks of searching, inquiring, and experimenting, his efforts were rewarded. How? That is still a secret. Suffice it to say that he found this wonderful new beauty product and brought it back with him to this country. Now, Washington women who have heard vague whisperings about a remarkable mask which gives the skin a new start in life have it right here at hand.

It's called the Paris Rose mask. It's a soft almost waxy substance the color of blush roses. After a complete and inervating facial it is spread over the face and allowed to remain about 20 minutes. It is so delicate and the texture so fine that it penetrates the pores and purges them of waste matter. When it is removed you may hold it up to the light and actually see the dingy substances drawn from the skin.

After the mask the facial is continued. When you finally survey yourself in the mirror, you are overjoyed to see what a clear, clean complexion yours has turned out to be.

The benefits derived from the mask treatment are many. Not only do you rid your skin of blackheads, but you have helped the pores to contract. If you have a coarse "porey" skin it's doubtless because these pores are so clogged up they just naturally can't grow smaller. By freeing them of extraneous matter, you allow them to shrink to their normal size.

If you have decided it's about time to give your skin a real renovating, then do try the Paris mask. Don't, however, tear down and expect to have it over in a jiffy. The treatment takes 1½ hours, but believe us, it's time well spent.

Old Hats Renovated.

HATS SOMETIMES like old wines grow more to our taste as time goes on. Take for instance that high crowned peaked chapeau that you thought a bit daring last year. This fall it's right in the style swing, but, alackaday, it has a worn and haggard look.

Don't worry, though, there's a certain local shop that makes a specialty of doctoring hats and making old ones as good as new. You can go there for a little reshaping, for new trimming, for cleaning, for any type of hat alteration. In fact, you can even have a hat made to order if you like.

So — before you go pell-mell through last winter's millinery and discard you old things right and left, see what this shop can do for them.

Exquisite Perfumes.

THE MANUFACTURER of an exquisite but oh-so-expensive perfume decided a few weeks ago that the perfume bottle itself was costing him so much money that he'd better close out the line and go about things in a more conservative manner. Hearing of this, the buyer of a local toiletries section contacted the manufacturer immediately and offered to buy this "closed out" stock to sell at a downright give-away price. His proposition was accepted so now we have this la-de-la fragrance reduced from $16.50 to—$4.15!

The bottles are like precious jewels. They're opaque glass, square cut and subtly tinted in blended color tones. As for the perfumes, they are truly beguiling!

Call Ruth Anne Davis, of The Washington Post, National 4200, Extension 323, for further information, or write, inclosing stamped, addressed envelope.

99% of Fund to Be Paid Idle as Wages, She Says

Harris & Ewing.

MRS. HALLIE FERGUSON FLANAGAN.

By Hope Ridings Miller.

WHO IS THIS WOMAN who heads the Federal Theater Project for the Public Works Administration? What is her background? Her experience? Her knowledge of the stage and what it embraces? Her plans for carrying through the greatest drive ever conceived for the American theater?

Who—in other words—is Hallie Flanagan?

These and similar questions bombarded the office of Harry L. Hopkins, Works Progress Administrator, soon after Mrs. Flanagan's appointment was confirmed. Since then there have been other questions of like nature, gradually declining in number as the project got under way.

From the first, Mr. Hopkins was not disturbed. He knew Mrs. Flanagan had been chosen only after careful consideration, that she didn't particularly want the job; had, in fact, suggested other persons for it, and consented to accept only after she was convinced she was the one for the place.

Mrs. Flanagan's Experience.

Mr. Hopkins knew, furthermore, that she had founded a successful college-community theater at Grinnell College, Iowa, soon after her graduation; that she had later taken her M. A. at Radcliffe and had been George Pierce Baker's production assistant at Harvard; that she had founded and directed the Vassar Experimental Theater, hailed far and wide as a new and refreshing influence in America; that she had received a Guggenheim Fellowship and gone abroad to observe the theater in 12 countries, and to gather material for her book, "Shifting Scenes in the Modern Theater," a widely read account of what she saw of the stage on the other side of the Atlantic.

So Public Works Administration officials were convinced this small, soft-voiced, dignified woman with a flair for words and unusual artistic and executive ability would get things done.

Yesterday at her office, between long-distance telephone calls and telegrams, Mrs. Flanagan told something of how her program had been launched, its progress, plans to be worked out later, and her hopes for the future of the American regional theater.

Business Proposition.

As a preface, she made it clear that the Government isn't taking this twenty-seven-million-dollar appropriation to establish a Federal theater where every stage struck girl and would-be Hamlet in the country can become professional actors. "In the first place, the money is to take care of a number of arts programs besides the theater," she explained. "Besides, it is largely a business proposition. Ninety per cent of what is spent will go into wages for unemployed persons who have formerly made their living in the theater. If the same number were on the dole, it would cost the Government nine-tenths of the amount of the appropriation, anyway."

"The hope of the Administration, then, is that the remaining ten per cent will train the unemployed so that they can earn their living, find places for themselves in the theater, after the Public Works Project is completed; and that some of the enterprises begun now will be vital enough to continue on their own strength after the Federal grant is spent."

She further explained, "The task is not an easy one. We must not compete with private theatrical enterprises, and we must draw most of our workers (nine out of ten, in fact) from the relief rolls."

In this connection she said there are thousands of stage people on relief.

The situation in New York, Mrs. Flanagan believes, presents her greatest problem. Provisions are already being made to take care of many of the 3,000 trained actors and actresses out of work, she explained. Elmer Rice, noted playwright, is regional director.

Plans for Projects Mapped.

Mrs. Flanagan has already worked out plans for theater projects in other parts of the country. For example, one city in the East is to have a playhouse in connection with its art museum. In Chicago, there are to be regular presentations of vaudeville and variety acts given by unemployed actors at the shelter houses in the many parks that dot the city.

Her program as a whole provides for the organization of theater companies as separate departments of existing non-profit companies in universities, towns and cities where theaters have already developed. "I'm greatly interested in the regional theater," Mrs. Flanagan said. "In that lies our chief hope. The future of the American stage depends largely on persons who write about things they know best."

Her program also includes help for marionette and children's theaters, for vaudeville, variety and circus projects (the first bill she signed after she took her present position pertained to these), for theater companies in CCC camps, for the teaching of theater techniques

About any, or all, of these Hallie Flanagan will talk at length. About herself or what she has done in the past, she says nothing. Nor will she evince any criticism of the modern professional stage, or give suggestions for its improvement. "I'm not interested in what is wrong with the American theater," she said, "but I am happy so many professional stage people are taking an active interest in the Federal project.

"One of our greatest handicaps in this work will probably work to our greatest advantage,' she said. "We aren't going to have enough money to spend on elaborate settings and costumes. In my own opinion that's a good thing. I'm interested in simplicity and functionalism on the stage; not on setting up expensive backgrounds."

Artistic But Inexpensive.

Those who have seen Mrs. Flanagan's productions at Vassar report she has given highly artistic productions at a cost of less than $100 each. She agrees with Gordon Craig's theory that "It is not possible to put the human body against painted canvas and have either truth or art result." The last play she gave at Vassar, "The Dance of Death," had a simple conical platform that served in turn as a bathing beach, the prow of a ship and a night club. One of the most impressive productions given in any experimental theater, it was also one of the least expensive.

Yet, contrary to a widespread belief, Mrs. Flanagan is not attempting to pattern Federal theaters throughout the country on the one at Vassar, whic his primarily an experimental enterprise. Nor does she plan to transfer the Soviet theater system to the United States or to make the American stage a propaganda vehicle. Although she has spent much time in Russia, where she found the theater vital and impressive, she realizes "what works in the Soviet would not necessarily be suitable in this country." But she is convinced the theater must be more closely allied with modern life; that it must exist in terms of contemporary problems and events.

That is why the regional theater is one of her chief concerns, and at this time comes second only to her interest in removing trained stage people from relief rolls through the Federal theater project.

This BUSINESS of LIVING

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: Perhaps it is quite out of the ordinary for you to get a letter like this one, but you seem to help in so many different ways, I thought maybe you could help in this case.

• • • •

Here is the situation: A woman I know has just lost her daughter—her only means of support, since she lost her husband several years ago. She is in poor health, has been for about five years, and has had several operations, among them a major one of a serious nature this past year. It is out of the question for her to work as she is not strong enough. Her church is furnishing her with room and meals, but not with clothing. Some clothing has been given her, but not a winter coat.

• • • •

I have been thinking surely there is somebody, somewhere in Washington, who has discarded a coat and who would be glad to donate it to this most unfortunate woman. She can wear size 14 or 16.

Sincerely,

MRS. W.

Many Appeals Received

DEAR MRS. W.: Appeals similar to yours have been published from time to time through this column, but I regret to say they have never met with the desired response from readers. I suppose this is because nearly every one today who has anything to contribute to charity also has a confidential and preferred list of persons whom he feels duty-bound to help. However, nothing ventured, nothing gained—so here's your letter in print, submitted in the hope that somebody may be sufficiently touched by this woman's plight to supply the coat she needs.

• • • •

I made inquiry of the U. S. Information Bureau, 1423 F street, northwest, District 4030, to learn what relief agencies, if any, are prepared to give aid in such cases as this. I was referred to Miss Alice Hill, director of the Public Assistance Division of the District of Columbia, which comes under the Board of Public Welfare. Her headquarters are at Fifth and H streets northwest, and her telephone number is District 2985.

• • • •

In Miss Hill's opinion, this petition should be addressed to the charitable organization maintained by the church to which this woman belongs. For instance, if she is a Catholic, the Catholic Charities might well be considered the logical source of supply; if a Jew, the Jewish organization; if a Protestant, the Family Service, or the Salvation Army, perhaps. If it is a case which merits assistance of the Public Assistance Division, Miss Hill would need to know in what section of the city the woman lives, in order to refer her to the right branch relief station. It might be wise, therefore, for you to write to or talk with Miss Hill about the case in case the direct and simple answer to your request is not supplied by some column reader.

One-Dish Meals Are Nourishing And Economical

Recipes Are Suggested for Tempting Meat, Cheese and Fish Plates.

By Elisabeth Ellicott Poe.

NEWS DISPATCHES telling of meatless, wheatless and other food saving days in wartime Italy are vivid reminders to Washingtonians of similar conditions that prevailed here in 1917-1918, when Food Administrator Herbert Hoover put the pertinent question to the American housewife:

"Is your family eating to live or living to eat?"

In these days of depression slim budgets and the necessity of making every penny count the wise American homemaker does not need the horrors of war to make her realize her job demands that she not waste food through such methods as (1) throwing edible food in disposal cans as refuse, (2) the spoilage of food through careless handling and storage in the home, (3) food spoiled by careless cookery, (4) waste in preparation, (5) overgenerous serving of food.

Suggestions for Housewives.

The homemaker thinking this over should ask herself if even a slice of bread is wasted daily in her household. If it is, that means that a whole loaf is wasted every 15 days, or 24 loaves a year.

In the matter of meat, frequently pieces weighing an ounce or two are thrown away from platters because they are considered too small to serve again.

Sometimes the housekeeper throws away cheese because it is too dry. That is a foolish waste. Grate it and push it in a bottle or waxed paper to use on au gratin dishes.

During the World War one dish meals became popular and showed new ways of food economies without curtailment of actual nutriment.

Here are recipes for several of them:

Potted Hominy and Beef.

5 cups cooked hominy
4 potatoes
2 cups carrots
1 teaspoon salt
¼ pound dried beef
2 cups milk
2 tablespoons fat
2 tablespoons flour.

Melt the fat, stir in the flour, add the cold milk, and mix well. Cook until it thickens. Cut the potatoes and carrots in dice, mix all the materials in a baking dish, and bake for one hour.

Fish Chowder.

Rabbit, fowl, or any meat may be used instead of the fish, or tomatoes instead of milk. Carrots may be omitted.

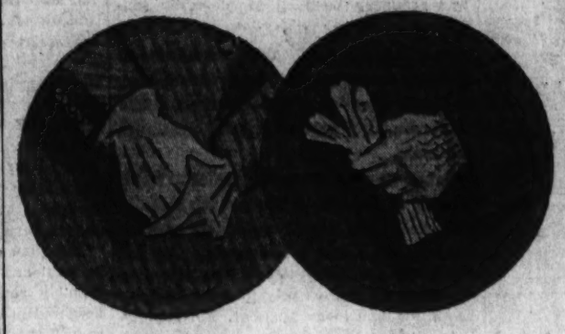
1½ pounds fish (fresh, salt, or canned)
9 potatoes, peeled and cut in small pieces
1 onion, sliced
2 cups carrots cut in pieces
¼ pound salt pork
3 cups milk
Pepper
Three tablespoons flour

Cut pork in small pieces and fry with the chopped onion for five minutes. Put pork, onions, carrots, and potatoes in kettle and cover with boiling water. Cook until vegetables are tender. Mix three tablespoons of flour with one-half cup of the cold milk and stir in the liquid in the pot to thicken. Add the rest of the milk and the fish which has been removed from the bone and cut in small pieces. Cook until the fish is tender, about ten minutes. Serve hot. You can omit salt pork and use a tablespoon of other fat.

Blind Cellist Plays Today.

The District of Columbia Federation of Women's Clubs will present today on its weekly broadcast over Station WRC the well known violincellist, Delphine Desio. Although deprived of physical sight when an infant, Miss Desio has devoted many years to the serious study of the cello, as well as to the theoretical side of music, and has appeared in recital in Washington, Baltimore, Philadelphia, Harrisburg and Atlantic City. Miss Desio will be accompanied by Dorothy Russell Todd, who is a pupil of Welden Carter. Mrs. Todd has appeared with Miss Desio on several programs.

Male Attire Incomplete Without Proper Gloves



In the upper circle is shown the recurrently popular string-knit glove in pale yellow; in the lower, smart tan mocha gloves in slip-on style, for town wear.

By Robert Fairchild of Men's Wear Magazine.

SINCE BIBLICAL TIMES, the glove has been a symbol of good faith, of authority, of incorruptibility, or of defiance. Land was held in the Middle Ages by virtue of the king's glove; gloves were exchanged among the ancient Israelites to confirm and retify their bargains, a knight wore his lady's glove in his helmet to let spectators know "how he was doin'," and to have a glove thrown in one's face remains even today a serious insult.

All of which is only to impress you with the importance of your "hand-shoes," as the Germans call them. And to lead you gently to the thought that your attire is not either fashionable or complete if proper gloves do not accompany it.

Pigskin More Informal.

For the ordinary affairs of the day, the mocha glove, or the sueded leathers that resemble it, is the leader. I say "resemble it," because genuine mocha, which is made of the hide of an Arabian goat, is technically known as a degrain, as distinguished from a suede. The soft fuzzy appearance is produced by removing the grain of the leather. But the net result, whether degrain or suede, is a soft and good-looking leather. In gray or brown, this type is suitable for town wear.

A somewhat more informal style is pigskin. Good pigskin may be distinguished by the absence of the bruises and abrasions that the hogs may have incurred in fighting or grubbing. In good pigskin the surface is marked by pinprick-like pores. Scratches and rough spots are the mark of the pugnacious pig and the inferior leather.

Capeskin has a somewhat more limited popularity, but among its adherents are some of the best-dressed men in the country. The color preference this season seems to be for reddish russet tan.

For evening wear, white kid or white mocha is the accepted style—in fact, is almost mandatory.

Gloves vary in model as well as leather and color. The most popular variety has a snap fastener. Slip-on gloves are convenient and informal looking. Some of the best grade gloves close by means of a button.

For sports and for spectator sports, for motoring and country wear, the string-knit glove is continuing and increasing its popularity. There are three major kinds—cotton string-knit, woolen string-knit and cotton string-knit with a wool lining.

Another division of sports gloves are knitted wools, such as winter sports participants like. Bold tartan plaids and all-over patterns adorn these gloves.

An Old Spanish Custom.

The great dandy, Count D'Orsay, held by some of his contemporaries to have succeeded Beau Brummel as the sartorial leader of London, maintained that the properly dressed gentleman must wear six pairs of gloves a day, for the various occasions. There is an ancient tradition in Spain (yes, believe it or not, an old Spanish custom), that if a gentleman falls asleep while in the presence of a lady he is bound to present her with a pair of gloves.

Proper Feeding Governs Baby's Future Health

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

THE BABY was not well. Exactly what the trouble was his mother could not determine. She was feeding him according to the formula the doctor had given her and yet he was fretful and listless and seemed, as far as one could see, to be losing weight.

It never occurred to the mother that the food prescribed for the baby at two weeks was not suited to a four-month-old child, and if a neighbor had not advised the young mother to go to a doctor, the baby might have suffered lastingly from the effects of starvation.

If it is impossible, owing to distance, for a mother to consult a doctor or clinic frequently, she should invest in a good book on the care and feeding of infants—not an old standby used by her mother but a new though preferably somewhat conservative manual.

Most doctors will know of such a book and advise the mother about it. If she cannot get the desired information from the doctor, there are enough clinics and advisory bodies, who, if sent a stamped, self-addressed envelope will suggest which books are best.

Nature is not an adequate guide in baby feeding, nor is it safe for the average mother to use the trial and error method.

Strictly Speaking

What About These?

1. Is it correct to say, "William arrived safe" or "William arrived safely?"

2. Is umbrella correctly pronounced with three or four syllables?

3. When is the hyphen required between words?

1. Both are correct. The meaning is the same either way.

2. With three. Take the "umber" out of um-BREL-la.

3. The hyphen is used in compound descriptive phrases which convey one idea. For example, "well-fed," "hard-hearted," "old-fashioned" and "black-eyed."

Ordinary Care Will Bar Acute Gastritis Cases

Glass of Warm Water Before Breakfast Advised for Chronic Condition.

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

FOR many years it was thought that a diagnosis of gastritis (inflammation of the stomach) was not justified and an attempt was made to associate all stomach disturbances with the presence of ulcers or some upsets of the secreting glands leading to the production of too much or too little gastric juice. Nowadays, however, many experts are willing to agree with the Danish physician, Knud Faber, that gastritis constitutes a formidable disease entity.

Most of us have suffered attacks of what might be termed acute gastritis, attended with severe pain and perhaps some nausea. If we exercise ordinary care about our diet we will experience but few repetitions of these acute symptoms.

A great wave of food fads has swept the country. For example, we have been urged to consume a large amount of indigestible material "for the colon's sake." As a result hundreds of thousands of tons of "roughage" of all sorts are swallowed each day. It is more than likely that a considerable proportion of our colon difficulties is due to the too literal acceptance of these back-to-nature diets. Perhaps many cases of chronic gastritis have been developed likewise.

The symptoms of acute gastritis are at first relatively mild. There may be only the sensation of undue fullness after eating even quite small meals. Loss of appetite will be noted. This may not be observed at the noon or the evening meal, but on arising in the morning the individual may have a sensation of nausea, without the slightest desire for breakfast. The reason is not far to seek. The irritated gastric glands have been secreting during the night quantities of thick, glairy mucus designed to protect the inflamed cells.

Treatment consists in (1) the correction of the diet, avoiding all irritating substances; (2) insistence upon regular meals; (3) thorough mastication of food, adequate time being allowed; and (4) rest after meals, of one-half to one hour, if symptoms of discomfort, fullness, etc., are obvious.

In chronic cases it is sometimes necessary to wash the stomach to remove the accumulation of mucus. This procedure can be taught most patients. If the washing process is annoying or not well understood the administration of hydrogen peroxide by mouth is recommended by some physicians. This may induce nausea; at any rate, it serves to detach the mucus from the stomach wall. Drinking a glass of warm (not hot) water before breakfast may give relief. This should be sipped slowly, and should not contain salt, lemon juice, or any other substance.

PLEASANT HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

THERE'S ALWAYS A ROMANTIC LURE about an attic room . . . maybe because of remembrances of old trunks overflowing with faded treasures of bygone days.

• • • •

L. E. J. WRITES: I'm afraid I've bitten off more than I can swallow—we have an attic room with only one dormer window. Well, I decided to make it into a bedroom for myself. I'm buying new furniture—what type will tend to brighten the effect? The only old piece I'm using is an ugly dark wood bed. What would you do with it, and what wallpaper, curtains and draperies, rugs and chair coverings?

• • • •

ANSWER: Maple is a light wood for your furniture. Then slipcover the head and foot boards of the bed in pink chintz with turquoise blue ruffles. Why don't you select a wallpaper with a white ground and pink polka-dots in it? For the bedspread and draperies, use a flowered chintz in pink on a white ground with turquoise welting. You might use white net for the glass curtains.

No Inflation Ahead?

The statisticians and analysts of the Bureau of Agricultural Economics are intrepid prophets who look into the future and tell the public what they see. In their report on the Agricultural Outlook for 1935-36 they survey the entire industrial and financial field in their zeal to weigh the innumerable factors that influence the demand for agricultural products. Unlike their timorous brethren in other branches of the Government service, who usually stick close to facts and current estimates, they use their findings as a springboard from which to jump to all sorts of unverifiable conclusions.

We are told, for instance, that consumer buying power in this country is likely to be increased about 10 per cent in 1936. Taking a long-time view, the bureau believes that the trend both of industrial activity and buying power will probably continue upward during the next two or three years. The bureau experts also expect the general price level to advance, although "possibly not at a rate as rapid as the increase in industrial production, unless monetary or credit inflation becomes a factor in raising the general price level."

This last statement is especially interesting, taken in conjunction with a discussion of the probable effect of excess bank reserves upon the volume of credit. The bureau, displaying a confidence not shared by all financial experts, states that "as long as there remains a surplus of unutilized productive capacity, it seems probable that the use of buying power made available through expansion of bank credit will be reflected more in an increased output of goods than in higher prices." This seems to be rather in the nature of a pious wish than a reasoned conclusion, since the only evidence advanced in support of the opinion is the experience of the recovery years following the crises of the seventies and the nineties.

The optimistic forecasters neglect, however, to note the vast differences between those earlier years and the present time. Then there were no huge Federal deficits which had to be financed by forcing Government issues into bank portfolios. In the seventies we were engaged in preparations for restoring the gold standard, and in the nineties we were fighting to preserve it. In those days, increases in bank deposits reflected a growth of resources; they were not the outgrowth of monetary manipulation, and Government borrowing which have created the excess reserves of the present day.

The Bureau of Agricultural Economics is undoubtedly right in concluding that there is room for a very considerable expansion of credit to take care of the needs of business during a period of recovery, without risk of an inflationary rise in prices. But it loses sight of the fact that Government spending, not private speculative excesses, constitutes the greatest single threat to price stability and makes the existence of $3,000,000,000 of excess reserves a veritable powder mine.

A Bad Joke.

It is a temptation to dismiss the current hullabaloo over communism in the schools as merely arrant nonsense. Unfortunately that is not possible. For the self-designated "hundred percenters," albeit most of them are doubtless stirred by the worthiest motives, are actually howling headlong down the road to Fascism.

Consider the "compromise" gratuitously offered by the Board of Education: Let all school children be informed of the evils of communism and no more. That is pitiful propaganda of a sort that every exile from a dictatorship will recognize all too readily. In Russia the evils only of capitalism are taught; in Germany the evils only of non-Teutonic cultures. Gen. Fries and his attendant loud-speakers apparently have not the most elementary conception of the function of education in a democratic state.

If this goes on it will cease to be funny. It is outrageous that an excited minority should be suffered even to attempt to stampede a competent Board of Education after it has taken a carefully considered stand, on competent legal advice, regarding principles underlying the education of Washington children. The Board of Education holds no brief for anything but real Americanism. The Board of Education is firm in its allegiance to democratic principles. Further, the Board of Education is not blind. On the contrary, it is composed of citizens particularly distinguished for their breadth of vision—a quality conspicuously lacking from the make-up of those who seem to cherish Hitler as the ideal statesman.

For Constructive Neutrality.

Secretary Hull's latest statement on the subject of neutrality, made over the radio on Wednesday night, has secondary implications for the present European crisis but was primarily intended for domestic consideration. What the Secretary of State asks, and has the right to expect if he is to fulfill his most responsible task successfully, is the co-operation of the American people in developing a neutrality policy worthy of the name.

Present legislation on this subject, rushed through at the close of the last Congress, is universally regarded as not merely unsatisfactory, but actually dangerous. As the President has pointed out, the law has aspects much more likely to bring us into hostilities than to keep us out. Fortunately it is only a temporary measure and one of the first and most vital duties of the forthcoming session of Congress will be to replace the existing act with constructive legislation in this field.

A senatorial move is already on foot to extend the present embargo on "implements of war" so as to make the phrase applicable to those basic raw materials which are of much more moment as munitions than are guns and shells. That extension is desirable, if we really want neutrality. But, as Secretary Hull points out, the restrictions must not be laid down in the form of "inelastic rules or regulations."

As a basic principle of good government the Congress, having first carefully defined the general objective of national policy in any field, must leave to the administrative arm a certain latitude in making the policy effective. And in the sphere of foreign relations, where new factors beyond our national control are constantly obtruding, such administrative elasticity is doubly essential. Mr. Hull speaks very moderately when he says that if the country is to preserve neutrality "the Executive should not be unduly or unreasonably handicapped" in carrying out the mandate of Congress.

That point should be obvious to all. The Secretary of State, however, on Wednesday night proceeded from this elementary thesis to one which richly demands closer public consideration. At best, neutrality for a country with the far-flung interests of the United States is difficult to preserve. Therefore, the effective way to further neutrality is to play a positive part in the prevention of war, and to assist collective efforts for the speedy termination of war if in spite of all endeavors it actually breaks out. In Mr. Hull's words: "If peace obtains, problems regarding neutrality will not arise."

The grave shortcoming of our present neutrality legislation is that it may put us in the position of assisting an aggressor nation and, therefore, in outright opposition to those countries which after judicial decision are seeking collectively to restrain the outlaw state by peaceful pressure. A policy which tends to make us an accessory to international crime is not neutrality. And in addition to being inefficient it is degrading to the moral sense of the American people. Former Secretary Stimson put the point concisely in saying recently that "the great masses of our countrymen do not wish to drift into a position of blocking the efforts of other nations to stamp out war."

Secretary Hull now makes the same point in other words. "I conceive it to be our duty," he observes, "not only to remain aloof from disputes and conflicts with which we have no direct concern, but also to use our influence in any appropriate way to bring about the peaceful settlement of international differences." A conscientious director of the Nation's foreign policy could say no less.

The complete agreement of Mr. Hull and Mr. Stimson on this great issue is symbolic. There is no question that the people of the United States should warmly support such legislative changes as are necessary to correct our imperfect start by making the national will for constructive neutrality effective.

Changing Emotional Styles.

Billy Sunday's death arouses thoughts which go beyond a career that really ended some years ago. The sawdust trail—over which nearly 42,000 converts once trod during a single revival in Philadelphia, carrying, incidentally, more than $51,000 in thank offerings—has long since fallen into disuse. And the reason has not been so much the declining vitality of the acrobatic evangelist as the evolution of the society to which his magic emotionalism was addressed.

Like most characters who attract a tremendous popular following, the Rev. Dr. Sunday was a product of his age. Compared to our own time, the pre-war years were comparatively dull and humdrum. In that atmosphere Billy Sunday's spectacular bouts with the devil, and the subsequent profitable outbursts of religious hysteria, supplied a much-needed outlet for America's innate exuberance. If the famous evangelical dervish were in his prime today, however, his show would undoubtedly be a second-rate attraction.

For in this predominantly economic age the "madding crowd" has swung its allegiance to the Coughlins and Townsends. Promises of rewards in the hereafter do not hold the appeal of economic "salvation" that may be anticipated just as soon as the advocates of the various panaceas can be installed in power. Instead of hitting the sawdust trail, therefore, the modern followers of the revival tradition are more inclined to form a bonus army of one form or another.

Revivalism is revivalism, however, whether it is fostered by acrobatics in the pulpit or economic legerdemain over the radio. It is only our style in emotional effervescence that has changed.

Planning For Relief.

Local governments face the tremendous responsibility of taking over all direct relief activities in an atmosphere of confusion and dismay. Gov. Nice's urgent plea for a conference of governors to study the situation and Maj. Donovan's stirring appeal for oversubscription of the Washington Community Chest fund are symptoms of the alarm which is beginning to be felt. Unless some constructive planning can be substituted for the bungling to date, it is not improbable that many families will suffer from cold and hunger this winter, in spite of our huge relief expenditures.

The plan of restoring the relief function to local and State governments is unquestionably sound. Probably FERA officials now realize that they never should have assumed the primary obligation of feeding, clothing and housing destitute residents in 48 States. If this largesse continues to flow from Washington in such a way that its undermining strain is not felt directly by local taxpayers, the relief problem will never be solved. While there is general agreement, therefore, that a retreat is essential, the mess into which the FERA has led the country nevertheless makes the reversion to local relief all the more painful.

Most local officials realize that charity should begin at home. But their traditional policies of handling relief have been broken down by the squandering policies of Washington. In most cases it will be utterly impossible for municipalities to continue doling out funds with the prodigality of a Federal agency with billions of dollars at its command. Standards set by FERA will have to be sharply modified. New sources of revenue will have to be found. In short, the States will have to begin building a new and more rational relief system upon a heritage of confusion and wasted effort.

The problem is accentuated by the mounting difficulties of the WPA's job-creating scheme. Under the original plan the Government was expected to assume responsibility for all employables. No such optimistic performance can now be expected from the WPA. Moreover, that organization has ruled that able-bodied men and women in need of jobs after November 1 will not be eligible for WPA aid. With about 1,000 persons being added to the District relief roll each month, it is obvious that a serious problem soon will arise. Literally these people will face physical suffering unless they can be cared for through the Community Chest.

Such are the fruits of our reckless and opportunistic relief policy! Local governments are now expected to raise funds by one means or another to liquidate a colossal failure. With limited means they are assigned the task which the Federal Administration has failed to solve with billions at its disposal. Moreover, they are asked to pick up the broken threads of relief policy, without knowing where they may lead in the future. Will the entire burden of caring for the unemployed be shifted to local governments when the last of the $4,000,000,000 work-relief fund has been spent? Or will Congress dole out another enormous sum to be frittered away in butterfly enterprises?

Until some clear-cut policy is announced by the Administration, local governments will struggle under a terrific handicap. Relief is certain to continue on a hand-to-mouth basis, with hunger and want an ever-present reality. To point out these difficulties, however, is a very different matter from urging the Government to continue on the wanton path of a Federal dole. What is urgently needed is an intelligent definition of policy by the Administration so that the States may plan permanent systems for the relief of human destitution within their own areas. The current disorder and misgivings might then be avoided by using FERA funds to facilitate the essential transition.

In Perspective.

A class at Columbia University once was startled to hear Dr. Henry Fairfield Osborn declare that the Cro-Magnon Man, who roamed western Europe between 25,000 and 40,000 years ago, could have competed on equal terms with Dr. Butler's prodigies. Yet the eminent paleontologist who, as much as any other one man, built up the American Museum of Natural History in New York was not exaggerating his conviction.

Again, in 1931, he revised the world's concept of the slow development of the race by submitting that the oldest human was not the Java Man, as had until then been supposed, but the Piltdown Man who roamed the wilds of southern England about a million years ago. On the same occasion he said that the Heidelberg Man and the Peking Man lived some 920,000 years ago, while the Java Man, otherwise Pithecanthropus erectus, lived 500,000 and the Neanderthal Man a mere 70,000 years back.

Both statements suggest the perspective which the great scientist achieves from the vantage point of the heights to which his genius raises him. To Dr. Osborn, who died Wednesday, the grievous ills of our society must have seemed far more interesting than serious. Mere growing pains, he would have called them.

It may be true that money talks, but a lot of us don't seem to be on its list of speaking acquaintances.

There's a bright future in store for a lot of people, but the heat will be terrific.

Wishes All Were Like Hopkins.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

The past month or two has brought a good many changes in The Post, and none, I think, for the better. Your last editorials on the Relief Administration and the WPA are so grossly unfair, in my opinion, that I cannot refrain from writing my reaction to them.

In your editorial of November 4, perhaps a budding young editorial writer was simply overanxious to show his familiarity with a book of Latin quotations. If he really knew his Juvenal, he would realize that satire is effective only when based on truth, and he would not have dared to misapply the old Roman's words. The Post obviously does not favor an indefinite prolongation of the "dole," so what is so heinous about fitting work projects to the abilities of relief clients, whether they be entertainers or engineers?

You seem to prefer local responsibility for relief, as opposed to Federal. Yet, when Mr. Hopkins attempts to return the "unemployable" jobless to the States and localities that have traditionally cared for them, a big hubbub goes up in the editorial sanctum. It would seem that Mr. Hopkins has suddenly pulled the proposal from some dark recess of his brain! Surely the newspapermen of the Nation's Capital should remember that the President in his message to Congress last January said that that policy would be put into effect as soon as possible. Many States have already resumed the care of their unemployables; what is so alarmingly "sudden" about the suggestion that the District of Columbia do likewise, a full ten months after the President's announcement of policy? Poor Mr. Hopkins, "he's damn'd if he do, and he's damn'd if he don't."

Perhaps it is fun to point the editorial "Big Berthas" at Mr. Hopkins, but it really isn't worth the bother. He will never have time to notice it in his job of feeding and clothing more people than are in the entire populations of most countries of the world.

Finally, I wish that all administrators functioned in what you term "a truly Hopkinsesque" style. The Relief Administration, created almost overnight to meet a great emergency, with no precedents to guide it, has developed into as smoothly functioning and hard working an organization as the United States has ever known. Like Mr. Ickes' PWA, it has spent hundreds of millions, and given jobs to millions, with an honesty and integrity truly remarkable. Compare that with the hundreds of millions of dollars in priceless resources lost by one member of the "jailbird" Cabinet back in the days of "normalcy."

Peace Flower.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

I would be grateful if readers of The Post would kindly call attention of garden club members, indeed, flower lovers everywhere, as well as lovers of peace, to the following announcement:

We are trying to get the white pansy adopted as official floral emblem of the various peace organizations. Pansy, in the language of flowers, means "thoughts," while white symbolizes peace—peace thoughts.

"Significant Progress."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Washington is not only the city beautiful, physically, but it can truly be called the city religious, judging by its number of churches and religious cults. In a sense, we would say, Washington is overchurched. There are about 200 white churches and 150 colored churches, to say nothing of the many store-front religious groups that have no standing in national bodies. Yet in another sense, Washington is inadequately churched, if we think of the church as an organization whose major purpose is to inspire men to put into practice the noblest ideals known to the human race.

Our city is sadly lacking in many respects. Gambling and racketeering, crimes of all kind, the liquor interests worse than before prohibition days, prostitution stalking our streets, discrimination and unbrotherliness existing as though we were in a pagan city. How can the impotence of so large a church community be accounted for? Why is it Washington has not become as beautiful in spirit as it is physically?

In the first place, the religious forces have been unable or unwilling to pool their strength. The Jews, Catholics and Protestants have been satisfied to pursue individual courses, trying to conserve their identity, rather than lose their identity in cooperation, and thereby make forceful and compelling the ideals of mankind. Furthermore, Protestantism has reduced its strength almost to the vanishing point, because of denominational differences and racial antagonism.

But 1935 has been a great year for the religious forces of Washington. Very definite steps forward have been made. The committee on religious life in the Nation's Capital, composed of Catholics, Jews and Protestants, has been organized. On October 2, a mass meeting was held at Constitution Hall, with an attendance of over 4,000 persons present, where a wonderful program was presented, setting forth the objectives of this organization, each constituent body having a place on the program. During the last week, the executive committee of the Washington Federation of Churches announced that colored churches were invited to become members of that body. This action was impossible seven years ago.

We believe, therefore, these signs of a larger fellowship, a more united task, common goals and common objectives, will ultimately lead us to a finer spirit and a more wholesome community life.

Can "Patriotism" Dictate Education?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

The barrage of mustard gas which is being directed against the Board of Education for its intelligent American stand on the free discussion of economic questions in economics classes recalls the statement of Dr. Henry Suzallo, former president of Washington State University, in an address before the Spokane State Press Association a few years ago:

"A dangerous tendency in America is that of meddling. You shouldn't do a thing simply because you have the power. It is wrong to take educational perogatives out of the hands of educational experts. I don't know what we can do in our public school system unless we teach the truth. A majority never determines the truth, nor does a minority. Truth is determined by scientific means. If something can be proved by scientific means the schools should be allowed to teach it. Facts are not a dangerous thing in a democracy.

"Legislation concerning what shall be taught brings about propaganda, legal or illegal. Propaganda emphasizes the truth favorable to a particular cause and is emotional. Education emphasizes the truth as a question, good or bad, and allows the student to draw his own conclusions. It is intellectual. Propaganda is never education."

When we realize that in two States, Tennessee and Mississippi, the teaching of evolution in tax-supported colleges and schools has been made illegal; in several other States bills along the same line have passed the lower house; in several other Governors, State superintendent's textbook commissioners and city boards of education have taken arbitrary action to prohibit mention of evolution, even deleting it from the dictionaries used in schools, there is no telling where the line may be drawn on "forbidden" topics. In California, a certain well-known religious sect complained that science textbooks attributed disease to germs whereas that sect knew that disease originated only in the imagination.

The whole question resolves itself into whether an aggressive minority which pins big medals upon its own breast in the name of "patriotism" may be allowed to dictate what may and may not be mentioned in textbooks and classes to suit its own bigoted and fanatical fundamentalist notions, or whether an intelligent, broad-minded school board may respect the rights and opinions of all groups, including the working class, who also pay taxes and have a right to be heard.

The impression is spreading in many quarters that there is an ulterior motive camouflaged by a show of uniforms and flag waving. The soldier deserves credit for defending his country when attacked, but all patriotism is not confined to wearing a uniform. There are other homely virtues that strengthen a nation. Love of justice, industrial and social, is one of them.

ALCIBIADES.
Washington, Nov. 4.

One 1936 Vote.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Mr. Kelly Miller, whose letter appeared in The Post on November 1, should cheer for Supreme Court reversal of more New Deal dope dreams. For, just as timely strangling of the unlamented blue buzzard gave business its first real forward boost, so further lightening the ship of the cluttered junk and debris on deck would give it fresh impetus.

Who will envy the Administration that takes over in 1937? I speak as one of the duped who, with family, voted practically en masse for the candidate with the "personal charm" and "infectious smile." While considering Hoover no perfect candidate, should he oppose the head New Deal commissar, we shall vote for F. D.'s well-earned retirement to Hyde Park.

The Post Impressionist

Strike Three!

Post Office, Friday.

OUT in the Tennessee Fundamentalist fortress, half a year ago, the doctors told Preacher William A. Sunday he was going to die.

"Oh," laughed Baseball Billy, "I still have a third strike left!"

Well, day-before-yesterday the Umpire called that strike. So today, Friday, nearly every newspaper in the country will carry a Sunday editorial.

Probably they will say Billy was wholly typical of his age.

The Post-Impressionist is going to take a chance along another line.

We'll take a chance on recalling the Billy Sunday we generally disapproved of—who was the Billy we always in one sense admired. On that short, stocky, 145-pounder in his shirt sleeves, shaking both fists, crouching, springing, pleading, bellowing. On the sentimental side of the preeminent proponent of acrobratic evangelism — exhortation's tiger a-lashing on his tail.

* * *

We'd be sure to be repetitious if we attempted his history: How Pop Anson signed this Civil War orphan for the White Sox. How, the Eighties' speediest base-runner, Billy, upon his conversion, quit the game for a Y. M. C. A. job at $85 per month. How he led his first revival in a small Iowa railroad-town. How, soon, he found himself and sawed-off Homer Rodeheaver a century's end Moody-and-Sankey, marching to new popularity in a new century.

* * *

Every newspaper-morgue is supplying details of Billy's perfect campaign-organization. Little was left to chance. Before each battle, all local Business was canvassed in the interests of its own efficiency. Expenses had to be guaranteed. Every Protestant minister was pledged; choirs massed and trained; an usher-corps polished to the art of persuasion in the vast tent or, later, the vast hall. Series of preliminary heats were run-off in scores of churches.

These things are a matter of record.

But what record can adequately recall the Meetings themselves?

Hymns, with music that foreshadowed jazz, opened the program: over and over, "Brighten the corner where you are," "That will be glory!" Only at the instant of proper pitch entered—fresh from a trainer's ministrations—Billy Sunday.

* * *

He'd do a bit of shadow-boxing—his crepuscular opponent being the Enemy of Mankind.

He'd slap his hands with the noise of a seventy-five.

Pose as a baseball-pitcher grinding the ball.

Take a flying leap on to a chair. And then—

Then the verbal fireworks.

* * *

"Always leave 'em laughing when you say goodby" was George Cohan's contemporary motto. Billy's must have been "Make 'em laugh first—but have 'em crying when you quit."

* * *

He called it, doctrinally, "The Old Time Religion"—phrase generally applied to a sort of Christianity scarcely two centuries of age. He was given a Presbyterian degree: It is doubtful if he cared much about predestination, either Calvinistic or Augustinian. He did preach "Believe and Be Saved," but he also preached "The Brewer's Big Horses Won't Run Over Me."

Also, he preached in slang.

* * * *

And while the massed choirs rocked the tabernacle with "Just as I am," men and women of every degree hit the sawdust trail.

* * * *

From a series of meetings in Baltimore, Billy reported 25,797 converts, $46,000 in "thank-offerings."—from his 1916 Philadelphia series, $51,136 and converts to the number of 41,724.

Where did the money go? The Post-Impressionist owns to no suspicions of misappropriation.

Did the converts "stick?" That's another question.

Emotionalists these particular converts most likely were. Except for Billy, however, they would most likely have expended their emotions to less profit—less, not only to Billy, but to themselves. After all, we mustn't forget the emotionalism of Peter the Hermit and his converts: he was an honest man—yet Crusaders were the ruin of Christian Constantinople.

Yes, let's consider him. His is one of our exhibits in evidence that, far from Billy being wholly typical of Billy's time, Billy was largely a type eternal.

Billy's business was peculiar to Billy's epoch. Billy's doctrine, if he really had any, may have been a comparatively recent growth. But, whether we orthodox like them or not, there have always been evangelists whose preaching-methods were the preaching-methods employed by Billy—a few Christian religious evangelists like Peter the Hermit, some merely economic evangelists like old alchemist Raimon Lull or Townsend of the modern Townsend Plan.

And, whether we orthodox like them or not, there always will be.

Fair Enough

Dilemmas Of Geneva.

Geneva, Nov. 7.

ALL persons with a spark of humanity in them will sympathize with the unfortunate officials of the League of Nations who take charge of the construction of the new Palace of Peace which will be the permanent League home. There are those who are cynical enough to suggest the new Palace of Peace will make an excellent hospital for the next world war, but that is a case of rumor and anyway it's not at all certain the palace will be completed in time for the next world war.

Furthermore, it would be most unwise to use the palace as a hospital because under the rules of civilized warfare it is customary to drop bombs on hospitals. So there could hardly be any surer way of destroying the beautiful new palace, which cost ten million dollars, than to paint a telltale Red Cross on its roof and turn it into a hospital in the event of war between civilized nations.

• • • •

A FAIRLY certain way of protecting it would be to convert it into the general headquarters of one of the armies in the next war if it could be rushed to completion in time. It is one of the recognized civilities between civilized nations, and one of the few really touching courtesies in war, to refrain from bombing the headquarters of commanding generals.

These headquarters are large business offices of a semi-permanent character and the commanding generals realize how inconvenient it would be to be bombed. Such a bombing would toss clerks' typewriters off desks, burn letter files tracing a missing can of corned beef, which must be accounted for with affidavits in triplicate to the War Department and scatter testimony regarding the soldier who's going to be executed pour la patrie in the morning because he was treacherous enough to get shot in the hand or foot.

However, the problem for the officials who are constructing the new Palace of Peace is more immediate than the next world war, which is said to be fairly imminent at that, what with a million Italians under arms already and old Gen. Ludendorff urging Germans to throw a sneak punch when they get ready for the next war and declare war afterward.

• • • •

THERE have been many embarrassments in the construction of the palace, but none more painful than that which has been occasioned by the government of Mexico nominating Senor Diego Rivera to decorate the great salon of the press in the new building. All member nations were asked to contribute something to the decoration and furnishing of the new home of peace. The occasion is something like a wedding, and it's not the value of the gift that counts, but the spirit in which it is given.

That's just the trouble. It's hard to see how Mexico can have had the true spirit of peace in nominating Diego Rivera to decorate the press room.

Senor Rivera is the one who was invited by John D. Rockefeller, jr., to paint some murals in Rockefeller City and who not only snapped at the hand that fed him but almost chewed it off. Rivera's mural for Rockefeller City contained a complimentary picture of Nikolai Lenin and was distinctly unkind to everything Mr. Rockefeller represents. There was a great family conference of Rockefellers and the art committee of Rockefeller City and Rivera's painting was taken down. The Rockefeller family were greatly relieved when the controversy died down and it was their unanimous decision that Senor Rivera's art was offensive to right-thinking people.

But Mr. Rockefeller contributed $2,000,000 of the Rockefeller fortune, earned, as everybody knows, by the strictly honest business methods of the Senior John, to the new Palace of Peace. And now comes Mexico donating Rivera to paint another of his murals in a section of the building which represents a very dangerous temptation to an artist of his known tendencies.

• • • •

THERE is great nervous apprehension in the League of Nations. After all, the press, particularly in Europe, is not among the finest institutions in the world. Most of the papers in Europe are censored by dictators and are devoted largely to propaganda, mostly warlike. And the profession of journalism in France has often been compared to the oldest profession of them all, which is hardly fair to the oldest profession of them all, which is not dishonest anyway.

The question is whether the League would dare to hang Rivera's conception of the press in the salon of the press after he had done it. If the League refused, Senor Rivera might denounce the League for protecting notorious vice. And if the League should hang the picture the gentlemen of the press might refuse to accept the room.

And this is quite aside from the problem of the pink marble from Italy which is required to finish the work in the Palace of Peace. The first of the marble was furnished when Italy was in good standing, but to buy any more the League of Nations would be compelled to violate its own boycott against Italy in order to finish the great monument to peace.

British Policy at Geneva

All Three Political Groups In England Back League.

By Bertram Pickard.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Geneva.

IN view of the general election in England next week, and the important place occupied in the electoral campaign by League of Nations questions, it is interesting to analyze the respective attitudes to the League of the three political parties. Thus may be understood the nature and limits of the almost unanimous support accorded the government by public opinion in connection with the Italo-Abyssinian conflict.

Of the three political parties in England (Conservative, Labor and Liberal) the attitude of the Labor Party to the League is the easiest to define and describe.

True to its international outlook, the very constitution of the (British) Labor Party contains a commitment (Section 7 of Clause 4):

> . . . to assist in organizing a Federation of Nations for the maintenance of Freedom and Peace, for the establishment of suitable machinery for the adjustment and settlement of international disputes by Conciliation or Judicial Arbitration, and for such International Legislation as may be practicable.

In 1918, even before the League of Nations was born, the party adopted a Manifesto to the Nations urging:

> the immediate establishment, actually as a part of the Treaty of Peace with which the present war will end, of a Universal League or Society of Nations, a Supernational Authority, with an International High Court to try all justiciable issues between nations; an International Legislature to enact such common laws as can be mutually agreed upon, and an International Council of Mediation to endeavor to settle without ultimate conflict even those disputes which are not justiciable. We would have all the nations of the world most solemnly undertake and promise to make common cause against any one of them that broke away from this fundamental agreement.

This insistence upon the need for an extension of the principles of arbitration, coupled with the organization of collective defense, is repeated in many subsequent declarations of the Party, as is also the demand for disarmament.

Loyalty, both in theory and practice, to the triple formula of "Arbitration, Security, Disarmament," has been an outstanding characteristic of Labor's contribution at Geneva. The present endorsement of the old established policy, in view of Italy's resort to aggressive war in Abyssinia, is overwhelming, as was shown by the 20 to 1 vote in favor of sanctions at the recent meeting of the Trade Union Congress and the even bigger majority at the annual conference of the Labor Party.

• • • •

THE Liberal Party's attitude to the League is not so easy to define, partly because of the divisions in contemporary Liberalism, partly because no Liberal government has been called upon to prove itself at Geneva, so that frequent professions of faith in the League remain largely untested.

It would be a mistake, however, to minimize the influence of Liberal public opinion in England upon British policy at Geneva. The part played by the League of Nations Union in the education and mobilization of British opinion is well known throughout the world. It is generally realized that the so-called National Declaration Campaign (i. e. Peace Ballot), under the leadership of Lord Cecil and the Union, secured 11,559,000 signatures in favor of a strong League policy. But it is not so well known that, although all parties and sections of the community co-operate with the Union, the strongest support for its work comes from those middle class elements of English society (not least that of the Nonconformist churches) which formerly were the backbone of British Liberalism.

The chairman of the Union's Executive, Prof. Gilbert Murray of Oxford, is an unrepentant Liberal. The News Chronicle (formerly the Daily News), the outstanding Liberal newspaper in London, has always been unwavering in support of the Union as well as of the League itself.

• • • •

FINALLY, what about the Conservative Party? Here there has been ample opportunity for watching at Geneva the practical effect given to reiterated assertions by Conservative Governments and leaders that the League is the sheet anchor of British foreign policy.

Lord Cecil's outstanding service to the League, as well as that of Lord Balfour, cannot be really credited to the Conservative Party. Their service at Geneva was done despite their Conservative affiliation, notably in Lord Cecil's case. This must not be taken to mean that the customary lip service of Conservative administrations was necessarily insincere. It remains true, however, that even in the case of Sir Austen Chamberlain, whose genuine devotion to the League is unquestioned, Conservative delegations at Geneva, until the advent of Anthony Eden at any rate, have taken their cue in the main from the permanent officials. Their reserved co-operation with the League, to put it mildly—especially in the case of the Treasury and the Admiralty—is well known.

ANTHONY EDEN
Believes In The Big Stick.

But Anthony Eden is a portent and requires explanation. It is not enough to say that the results of the Peace Ballot enabled Mr. Eden and his sponsors in the Cabinet to snap their fingers at the "die-hards" and "isolationists," and pull off at Geneva—with the help of others, notably M. Laval—two such spectacular successes, within a few months, as the settlement of the Jugoslav-Hungarian quarrel, and the policing of the Saar by troops under the auspices of the League. The question remains—why did Mr. Eden want to snap his fingers in the face of the Beaverbrooks and Rothermeres of the party?

The answer is really a very simple one. Apparently the Conservative leaders have at long last reached the same conclusion that was reached by the drafters of the Covenant; that under modern conditions of national interdependence and scientific warfare, there is no effective defense against war apart from overwhelming collective action to stop aggression, or better still prevent it.

The governing class of Great Britain (apart from the "die-hard" element), it appears, have now decided, as Sir Samuel Hoare's great speech in the recent Assembly testifies, that, more often than not, a farflung Empire like the British Commonwealth of Nations has everything to gain from the operation of the "collective system" enshrined in the Covenant of the League.

• • • •

SINCE, for the moment, public opinion in England, irrespective of party, is overwhelmingly behind the government as regards its immediate policy in Geneva, may we draw the conclusion that differences of policy at Geneva, as between the political parties will henceforth disappear? I think not. Indeed important differences of emphasis appear, and will be accentuated after the general election.

Division of opinion arises, and will continue to arise, concerning two major questions—disarmament and revision of treaties, or "peaceful change" as it is sometimes called.

As to disarmament, the drive toward rearmament is now in full swing; and the argument is actually advanced—notably in Conservative circles—that the more Great Britain helps to operate the "collective system" the more armament she will need to fulfill her obligation under the Covenant. The old claim that the British navy is the world's policeman is being dressed up in a new disguise. The Labor view, in harmony with past policies and programs, will certainly be: the more collective security, the more disarmament.

With regard to "peaceful change," Labor policy already includes proposals for exploring ways in which the efficacy of Article 19 of the Covenant (Revision of Treaties), might be assured. Sir Samuel Hoare in his assembly speech referred to the need for negotiated changes in the status quo, but there are lacking signs that Conservative opinion in the country, or in the House of Commons, is favorable to change at England's expense.

On the other hand the Labor Party is already advocating a development and extension of the mandates system, designed to minimize and eventually to eliminate, the conflicts of competing imperialisms.

But that is the music of the future.

The Bright Colors Return.

The depression is over when people begin driving yellow, purple, pea-green and crimson automobiles again.

• • • •

Models exhibited at the National Automobile Manufacturers Automobile Show this month in New York reveal a sudden return to the gay-colored cars of the pre-slump era.

• • • •

Ever since 1930 the makers have been very shy about going far afield from the orthodox black, blue and gray tones, realizing that few people want to blossom out in a pink polka-dot limousine when the going is tough, even if they can afford to be giddy.

• • • •

Even if a man had money to buy a car during the slump he didn't want to make the purchase conspicuous. He knew it looked silly talking about economics from the overstuffed seat of a car that looked like a Mardi Gras float.

• • • •

If he had a son working for WPA he knew it would make the neighbors investigate.

• • • •

And if he had any distant relatives out of work he knew that he could no longer refuse to have them come over and live with him once they saw him whirling around town in a buggy that stood out like a circus wagon in a bread line.

• • • •

No, those brilliant plumaged automobiles were bad news when things were at the bottom, and the automobile makers knew it.

• • • •

One of the first signs that the worst was over came last year when the designers began bringing out the hot models, but they were pretty cautious. They weren't sure whether Fletcher P. Public, having decided to buy a new car, had nerve enough to broadcast his affluence.

• • • •

But the demand for flaming flivvers surprised them and this year's models show a pronounced rainbow trend, nobody dissenting.

• • • •

The day when you might see a neighbor in a black and white checked suit polishing up a sedan that looked like something designed for a Fourth of July pageant is coming back. Gangway for the hot car!

Beer Hall Putsch?

By Karl Schriftgiesser.

NOT for a long time has anything more silly taken place in the National Capital than the furor over communism at Wednesday's meeting of the Board of Education. According to those who were present the combined talents of Kaufman and Connelly would be needed adequately to describe it in all its ludicrous aspects. Yet for one moment it arose above the ridiculous; and outright Fascism of the very kind that has made Germany a nation despised by the world and Italy a nation scorned by the righteous, sounded forth. An undercurrent of a real danger to democracy swept through the hall, threatening to sweep away reason and respect for those fundamental rights which, I honestly believe, are being threatened, not by the grim and grimy communists but by the brilliant and clean-necked patriotteers now so busy in our midst tearing down the very institutions they claim to defend.

Gen. Amos A. Fries, authority on poison gas, was present to urge that the evils of Marxism be stressed in the schools, although, so far as I can learn, about the only teaching of communism that does take place is in the modern history classes where the children are told that Russia, whether you like it or not, is a communist state. If the kiddies ask what is communism, no doubt some teachers say it is what it is and others say it is what Gen. Fries thinks it is. But the ancient rumblings of Gen. Fries have come to mean little more to the majority of taxpayers hereabouts than the traffic noises on F street. He is expected to growl the way he does under the immunity which the District grants to all old Army officers, who, on the whole, are a very jolly lot.

• • • •

IT was Edward B. McDade, "spokesman for the Constitution Day Committee" and "patriotic instructor of the Veterans of Foreign Wars" (Lord knows they seem to need one), who sounded the tocsin for the Fascists and whose words as reported must have caused ardent Adolf, over in Berlin, to rub his hands with glee.

"So far," the veracious Washington Herald reported McDade as saying, "this has been a battle of words. But if the teaching of communism is insisted on, we'll go to war without words!"

In the past, during labor troubles and lynchings, when men of such forthright spirit have gone to "war without words" it has meant simply that they have ganged up and taken matters into their own hands. Are the veterans of Foreign Wars and the more senile members of the Constitution Day Committee really about to march upon the high schools, stage book burnings in the playgrounds, and execute a bloody purge among the helpless school ma'ams such as once occurred in the Hitler pansy patch? How else can one interpret these words?

• • • •

ONE'S first reaction upon hearing or reading such incitements to riot, is to say, "Oh, yeah?" and let it go at that. But perhaps it is best to add, a little belligerently, "You and who else?" That's the kind of language Fascists understand best. At any rate this whole fracas has descended from any plane of intelligence it once may have occupied. It is no longer a question of a reasonable definition of the verb "to teach." It is now openly and positively the battleground of Americanism versus Fascism and as such it seems incumbent upon those of us who value real Americanism to rally to its defense.

Communism, it must be perfectly plain for all to see, has happily made but little headway in the United States. Fascism, it should be even plainer, has made much. Such dangerous statements as those attributed to the Mighty McDade are far too common and are taken with too great unconcern by too many people. Their repetition, if unchallenged, can lead only to utter disrespect for the safeguards of the rights guaranteed each of us in the ten original amendments to the Constitution, which are fundamental law.

• • • •

YES, the rumblings of the Friesians may be dismissed for what they are: the mental indigestion of those who prefer talking to thinking. But the mutterings against law and order of our incipient Nazis is something else again. It was letting Adolf Hitler get away with similar speeches in the beer parlors, while the big shots egged him on from the sidelines, that got Germany into the mess it is. America is too nice a place to let it be ruined that way.

School Issue Voted; Site Now Problem

Waynesboro Approves a $150,000 Project.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Waynesboro, Pa., Nov. 7.—After the passage of a bond issue for $150,000 for a new senior high school Tuesday, the Waynesboro Board of Education is now confronted with the problem of finding a site. The bond vote was 2,767 to 1,148.

The vote opens the way for acceptance of a Government grant of $144,855, which must be taken up before the close of an option period, December 15.

Surveys of two possible sites have been made, one in the eastern part of Waynesboro, the other on lands of the late A. H. Strickler estate, adjoining the Fairview avenue grade school building.

School Stays Shut, Officials Tell 'Strikers'

Reduction of One-Room Houses From 96 to 7 Cited in Frederick.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Frederick, Md., Nov. 7.—The number of one-room rural schools in Frederick County has been reduced from 96 in 1923 to 7 November 1, County Superintendent of Schools Pruitt announced in declaring that the Broad Run School will not be reopened despite the fact that some 30 former pupils of the school have not attended any classes since it was closed September 3.

Pruitt pointed out that the Broad Run School was the last in the Middletown Valley to be consolidated and was not closed until improved roads were provided to transport the children by bus to Middletown and Jefferson. Five of the one-room schools still open are in Woodville District, where roads are in no condition to permit transportation of children. The other two one-room houses are at Braddock and near Thurmont, both in mountain sections.

The county school board, at a meeting yesterday, did not outline further steps toward settling the strike at Broad Run. Three parents, arrested for failing to send their children to school, asked a jury trial, which will not be scheduled until next February. In the meantime, the children will not attend school, their parents declare, and school officials don't know how to solve the problem.

Pruitt expressed himself today as regretting that the children are losing time in school. Patrick M. Schnauffer, counsel to the striking patrons, has promised to take the matter before the next session of the Legislature in an effort to repeal or amend the school consolidation law.

Virginia Opens Dark Tobacco Sales Tuesday

By the Associated Press.

Farmville, Va., Nov. 7.—A reduction in the stocks held by Virginia dark fired tobacco dealers, who will open the sales season at Lynchburg Tuesday and on all other markets Wednesday, has been offset by an increase of 1,500,000 pounds in the crop this year over last year, it was said here today.

P. M. Jackson, editor of the Dark Fired Co-Operatives' Magazine, quoted figures, provided by the United States Department of Agriculture's tobacco section showing the present supply of the fire-cured—U. S. type 21—leaf to be approximately the same as a year ago.

The Federal agency reported that stocks had been cut down about 2,000,000 pounds during the past year, but that the crop at the start of October was 19,320,000 pounds as compared to 17,762,000 pounds at the same time last year.

Snuff Types Scarce.

Reports received by Jackson indicate that Austrian type leaf will predominate in the Virginia offerings this year. This was said to mean that cigar type tobacco "of unusually good quality and size" will be plentiful.

Fillers, spinners and good snuff tobacco are due to be rather scarce in this year's crop and should bring very good prices, according to W. J. Dunnington, head of a tobacco company here.

Dealers here said they anticipated heavy sales throughout the belt on the opening day. Sales will begin Wednesday morning at Farmville, Drakes Branch, Blackstone and Bedford.

In addition, fire-cured (dark fired) tobacco will be sold on the Brookneal auction floors, where bright sales have been under way since October 1.

Stocks Down 2,000,000 Pounds.

The market's outlook was summed up by William Collins, acting chief of the Federal tobacco section, in a letter to Jackson, in which he said:

"The 1935 supply of Virginia fire-cured tobacco is approximately the same as that of a year earlier. On October 1 the crop was estimated at 19,320,000 pounds, as compared to 17,762,000 pounds in 1934, and the 1928-1932 five-year average of 21,933,000 pounds.

"On the other hand, stocks were reduced approximately 2,000,000 pounds during the year. Stocks on July 1, 1935, totaled 30,161,000 pounds, as compared to 32,230,000 pounds a year earlier. The increase in the crop from 1934 to 1935 approximately offset the reduction in stocks.

"During the 1928-1932 period stocks averaged 33.8 millions pounds. At present, therefore, supplies are below the five-year average."

Sales Tax Is Opposed By Danville Merchants

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Danville, Va., Nov. 7.—The Danville Retail Merchants Association has joined the State-wide fight against a general sales tax, which may be offered at the January session of the General Assembly. Walter M. Evans, attorney for the association, came here to organize the local merchants. He made an address in which he advocated the segregation of profits from the State liquor stores to be used in defraying old-age pensions, which would cost $2,500,000 a year.

Eight-Cylinder Love.

New York, Nov. 7.

SOME fellows go off on periodical drunks; others beat their wives. My dissipation is the annual Auto Show. Once a year I get that F. O. B. Detroit feeling, and off I go on an eight-cylinder spree. With lovelight in my eyes, I rush to Grand Central Palace, prowling among the new cars and climbing in behind the steering wheels when the salesmen aren't looking. From floor to floor I go, standing open-mouthed before the platforms where demonstrators explain the graphs and charts. This year there is one exhibit of cars which with grand showmanship, permits you to call Detroit on the long-distance phone free. I tried to get the operator to get Father Coughlin for me, but she refused. She said I could talk only to the Detroit factory and ask a question about the motor. Some week-day night, I'll get to the phone when she isn't looking and I'll get Father Coughlin.

• • • •

You meet a better class of people at the Auto Show, to paraphrase Milton Berle's line. For one week, no more, no less, New Yorkers act politely. In the presence of the shiny masses of machinery, which decorate the floor, we put aside our subway manners. True enough, I did race an elderly lady to a seat, but it was her own fault. She pointed to it or otherwise I wouldn't have seen it. Generally speaking, however, politeness reigns. The salesmen, with red badges on their lapels, set the tone by their own impeccable dignity. They talk softly, but convincingly, lowering and raising their voices with all the oral aplomb of C. B. S.'s David Ross or N. B. C.'s Hugh Conrad. They give the show the restraint of Cartier's or Black, Starr and Frost, and they exhibit the cars as tenderly as gems from the Detroit showcases. You can understand their almost reverent pride. Here are the blue ribbon models of the automobile industry. Each suave model represents millions of dollars invested in raw product and engineering genius. The Auto Show is the boutonniere in Detroit's lapel.

• • • •

By some intuitive sense, these salesmen can sense that I have an F. O. B. Detroit personality. With 50 people in the room, they'll come directly to me. Last night, with $7 in my pocket, I sneaked in and immediately a salesman purred up to me: "You want something in the higher-priced class?" he said, and the flattery went like rich wine to the head. I'll bet he says that to all the boys, but he got me. We wandered from one car to another, and he spoke so easily of large sums of money that he hypnotized me. Finally we halted in front of a low-slung model. "How much does this job sell for?" I asked, professionally. He lifted an eyebrow in a faint sneer: "Only $4,800," he said. I sneered, too. "You see, it's only eight cylinders," he said, apologetically. I clutched the $7 in my pocket and accepted his apology.

• • • •

"This job here is something you'd like," whispered the salesman, dropping his voice so that nobody else would be in on the secret. "It makes 102 miles an hour." A gleam of real interest must have filled my blue orbs. Together we stood back a few paces and surveyed the streamlined chassis. Out of his pocket he pulled literature, describing how this model had gone over Pike's Peak so fast that the mountaineers did not see it at all, and would not have known it had passed, but for the smell of gasoline in the air. "Have you ever driven 102 miles an hour?" the salesman demanded. I shook my head feebly. "But I've got a police card from Mayor Ellenstein, in Nevark, and another one from Sergt. Tom Brennan in Nyack . . ." I said hopefully. He looked at me and there was real sorrow in his countenance. "You've never driven a car 102 miles an hour?" he repeated. He tried to be nice about it, but you could tell that he was hurt, deeply hurt.

• • • •

On second thought, a car that travels 102 miles an hour might not be feasible. From Connie's Inn to the Hollywood is half a block. From the Hollywood to the Paradise is one block. It would not be safe for me to travel half a block at 102 miles an hour. Of course, if I left the Hollywood to go across town to El Morocco, a distance of eight blocks, I can see the advantage of this car. But once I arrived at El Morocco, this 102-mile-an-hour car would be practically useless to me again. Barney Gailant's place is seven steps from El Morocco, directly across the street, in fact. I'm almost tempted to believe that a car like that isn't practical in the city.

A recluse by nature, and lonely for companionship as only a Broadway columnist can be, the auto show serves another purpose. You get to know a lot of people. I came away from it last night with 36 personal cards from salesmen stuffed in my pockets. The horizon of friendship had widened and enlarged. The auto show is better than a Lonely Hearts' ball. At first, I was cynical about these cards: "I'll bet they'll forget all about me as soon as I leave," I said, petulantly, prepared for disillusionment. But this was a hasty conclusion and an indictment of these new-found friends. All day long, the telephone has been ringing. They all want me to go riding with them in their cars. If you have an f. o. b. Detroit personality, you'll find it's a nice, streamlined world to live in.

Hollywood, Nov. 7.

WILLIAM POWELL and Binnie Barnes are in a sequence in "Rendezvous" in which Miss Barnes places her purse on the mantel. She leaves almost immediately with Powell and doesn't take the purse with her.

However, says George Armbuster, when she is seen in the hotel hall she has her purse with her.

Lawrence Tibbett in "Metropolitan" is going to sing in the opera in Philadelphia. The scale of prices sign in the lobby of the Philadelphia Opera House, according to Dorothy Nickerson, had this billing: "George White's Scandals." They were careful when making this flicker not to model the theater after a particular opera house in Philly, because they didn't want movie fans to write in saying that the set wasn't correct in every detail. The "George White's Scandals" billing must have been a stock shot—and it might explain why the theater was crowded.

In "The Goose and the Gander" there is a bedroom scene in which Kay Francis locks the door on Genevieve Tobin and George Brent. This is all right with the censors and all right with Howard Frankel, but the lock happens to be on the outside of the door, making it impossible for Miss Tobin or Mr. Brent to open it.

Movie Fan Frankel wants to know if it is flicker etiquette for the hostess to lock her guests up for the night.

FRED ASTAIRE and Edward Everett Horton in "Top Hat," unknown to any one else, take possession of the room above the bridal suite to disturb Ginger Rogers and her husband, Eric Rhodes. They do disturb them. Rhodes rushes upstairs to get Astaire, but Fred leaves Horton there to meet the enraged husband. Ginger then phones Helen Broderick and tells her to save her husband, Edward Everett Horton.

Miss Broderick, claims H. Reckhart, doesn't know about the room upstairs, yet she rushes there directly and, of course, saves Everett.

No fair telling the players, Director Mark Sandrich.

Paul Muni is talking to Helen Lowell in "Dr. Socrates." When the conversation begins, writes Dorothy Duffy, Muni places on the table the book he has been reading. The book is next to him. When the conversation is completed, Muni has to reach across the table to get the book.

Edward Arnold in "Diamond Jim" and the Englishman, played by Eric Blore, have to jump from a fast moving train in a certain sequence. They jumped separately, yet, insists Herman Firks, they landed next to each other. The speed of the moving train would have taken them farther away from each other than seen in the flicker.

Also in this scene, the Englishman doesn't bat an eyelash when he picks himself up after jumping, because his monocle is still glued to his eye.

JACK OAKIE and Henry Wadsworth are shown escaping from G. Henry Gordon's men in "The Big Broadcast." Oakie and Wadsworth are fleeing atop a stage coach. From this coach the horses free themselves, allowing the coach to race down hill on its own speed.

In the early flashes of the coach, writes Felix Salmaggi, a whip is visible in its socket. Later, Boris, one of the pursuing men, shoots at Oakie, but hits the whip, breaking it in two. However, in the very next scene, the whip is shown still intact.

This chase scene was expertly filmed. Part of it was with stunt men. Another part was taken on a studio sound stage, with Oakie and Wadsworth being bounced about on a stage coach and a process screen in the background.

In assembling the chase scenes, the shot made before the whip was broken was inserted in a scene after Boris had hit the whip.

Another thing, Kenny Baker, the new singer on the Jack Benny radio program, is the fellow who did the singing for Henry Wadsworth.

In "The Broadway Melody," says Mike Terry, Eleanor Powell talks about and wears the fraternity pin given to her by Robert Taylor when they both went to high school.

It is very lovely, and shows that they once were friendly, but some one should inform Miss Powell and Mr. Taylor that the pin says Kappa Alpha Theta and that is a college sorority. Robert Taylor is a nice guy to be able to get into a sorority.

The Movie Boners' Club is still waiting for the picture without a flicker flaw.

THE President Speaks on Human Needs

"In pursuance of the announced policy . . . the Government is withdrawing as rapidly as possible from the fields of emergency home relief.

"In the task of caring for the less fortunate in the year of 1936 there are, of course, many important gaps to be filled. It is to the filling of these gaps that your earnest efforts are being directed.

"It cannot be emphasized too often that the task you have been doing all these years is far broader than relief. The public must realize more and more the great and necessary work you are doing in such fields as nursing, hospitals, child welfare, recreation and youth guidance. Such services as these have not and cannot be assumed as a responsibility of Federal Government. Their very nature consigns them to private agencies.

" . . . and so I say, Godspeed to you. The United States can have no higher ideal than that expressed in your slogan. To each and all of you let me say—

"BE A GOOD NEIGHBOR."

From the address of President Roosevelt to the 1936 Mobilization for Human Needs at the White House meeting September 22, 1935.

Note: Answering the false impression that "the Social Security Bill makes Community Chest work less important than before"—please remember that taxes to pay for old-age benefits do not take effect until 1937. Payments to the aged CANNOT BEGIN UNTIL 1942. As to unemployment insurance, NOTHING CAN BE PAID to unemployed workers before 1938! There will be a greater need in 1936 for Community Chest work—than ever before!

Men Sought On Maryland Relief Jobs

Projects Approved, Cash Ready, but Labor Is Scarce.

Leaders Gather as Crisis Nears; Direct Aid Ends Dec. 1.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Nov. 7.—New difficulties beset Maryland's Works Progress Administration today as leaders of the work-relief agencies gathered to discuss progress and the future.

While obstacles developed to the work-relief phase of the Maryland picture, the direct relief situation remained unchanged. Gov. Harry W. Nice's advisers still believe that no immediate session of the Legislature is made necessary by the ending of Federal relief, and the Governor's attempt to map concerted action by a number of States met with little encouragement.

Can't Find Workers.

The new troubles developing on the work-relief horizon arise from the question of labor supply. There are ample projects approved, and the money is ready, to employ men from county relief rolls. But Francis H. Dryden, State WPA head, says, the men on relief rolls cannot be reached.

"Jobs are being tendered to all available," Dryden said, "but there are a number of reports and a number of instances where the requisitions for workers are not being filled through the national re-employment office."

Dryden said that more men have part-time employment in private industry than was expected. Others are reported to be receiving relief and to be employables. This stumbling block in the path of work-relief was among a number discussed during the day in the office of United States Senator George Radcliffe.

U. S. Aid Gone December 1.

For the first time since the latest crisis arose, heads of the work-relief agencies were gathered together. Senator Radcliffe called his conference wit hthe idea of developing a concrete picture of this phase o fthe relief situation as it is now and as it will be after the Federal funds are exhausted on December 1.

While Senator Radcliffe was dealing with the problem in the State, Senator Tydings was directing his efforts toward ironing out some of the difficulties in Washington. Maryland's public works administration road program is being held up by Comptroller General McCarl on a legal point. While Senator Radcliffe tries to get the men, Senator Tydings tries to get the money.

Lehman Ignores Nice's Plea.

Gov. Herbert Lehman of New York did not act on Gov. Nice's suggestion that the States act in concert on the direct relief front. Gov. Lehman was on vacation at White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., after making an agreement wit hthe Federal Government as to the dole situation in his State. His secretary said that Gov. Lehman did not want to disasked Gov. Lehman to call a concuss public affairs. Gov. Nice had ference of Governors to discuss relief problems common to all the States.

Pending action on this suggestion, Gov. Nice said hsi new relief planning committee would continue with its activities. The proposed guberantorial conference, if it materializes, will discuss common problems, while the planning committee will try to solve Maryland's peculiar problems.

Special Session Opposed.

The opposition of State leaders to an immediate session of the General Assembly to act on relief taxes has not been changed by recent developments, the Governor said today. On Monday, when most of them thought the Federal Government would provide relief funds for December, they were against an immediate special session.

Since then, Federal officials have said very definitely that there would be no more funds when the present November allotment is gone. However, a majority of those who advised the Governor on Monday still see no need for summoning the Legislature at once.

The fiscal side of the relief is this: The State has enough money for November, as the Federal Government made an allotment. After December 1 it will have $300,000 per month from the gross receipts tax. It will also have to bear the entire care of from one-third to one-fourth of the relief load. The cost of the entire relief load has been about $1,100,000 per month.

High School Girl a Prosperous Turkey Farmer

Post Staff Photos.

Minnie Meryl Squires, 16-year-old student at Nokesville High School, whose home is at Greenwich, Va., is pictured amidst her flock of more than 50 turkeys which she raises and sells to Government workers in Washington. Miss Squires acquired her first three turkeys, bought with pennies she had saved, when she was 11 years old. Since then her flock has multiplied and many of her birds have been among the prize winning fowl at the county fairs. An active member of the 4-H Club near her home, she has won numerous prizes for her canned goods also. Minnie hopes to earn enough money with her turkey flock to pay for a college education. Her brother, Minter "Bud," below, 12 years old, raises hogs and ducks.

G.O.P. Planning To Contest All Races in Wise

2,000 Mail Ballots Cast in County Challenged Before Count.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., Nov. 7.—Republican plans to contest all races in Wise County, where 2,000 votes were cast by mail, were reported today as complete unofficial returns from Virginia's general election showed the next General Assembly will be composed of 131 Democrats, 8 Republicans and 1 Independent.

Each one of the mail ballots cast in Wise were said to have been challenged by Republicans before they were counted to show Democrats had won all offices by majorities ranging from 500 upward.

The election to the assembly of one Independent, Dr. J. W. Witten, Tazewell physician, was the high point in the hectic political battles waged by Democrats and Republicans in the big "Fighting Ninth" district.

Stuart Is Defeated.

Dr. Witten bested Harry C. Stuart, Democratic nominee and son of a former Virginia Governor, by an unofficial majority of 506 votes in the home senatorial district of Gov. George Peery. State Comptroller E. R. Combs and T. McCall Frazier, of the ABC board. Witten's home county of Tazewell gave him a huge majority to offset Stuart's lead in Russell and Buchanan counties.

The Deocrats also lost one House seat to Republicans, who held their own in the Senate by electing two members.

One of these Senate victors was Thomas J. Wilson, jr., Clifton Forge lawyer and member of the last House of Delegates, who defeated Senator George W. Layman, of Craig, long-time dry leader.

Judge Parker Wins Seat.

Republicans, however, lost the Senate place held for some years by Roland Chase to Judge R. R. Parker in the Wise-Dickenson district.

Belated returns also showed the following as victorious:

Lloyd M. Robinette (Democrat), incumbent, for the Senate from Scott and Lee counties; Charles R. Grabeel (Democrat), for the House from Lee County; Scott Litton (Democrat), incumbent, for the House from Russell County; H. B. Ellis (Democrat), for the House from Russell and Buchanan counties; W. H. Perry (Republican, incumbent, for the House from Scott County; C. M. Hunter (Democrat), for the House from Tazewell County, and S. R. Crockett (Republican) for the House from Wythe County.

Marine Held In Stabbing Of Wife, 22

Jake Perry Denies Assaulting, Throwing Her Into Tank.

Corporal Picked Up at Virginia Roadhouse on Warrant.

By the Associated Press.

Norfolk, Va., Nov. 7.—A boastful Marine corporal who said he liked to go places in a hurry—70 miles an hour in a high-powered automobile—denied from a jail cell tonight he was guilty of stabbing his estranged wife and throwing her into a septic tank.

An earlier police theory that her clothes had been soaked in kerosene and attempts made to fire her garments was discounted when a chemical analysis showed the fluid to be Mosquito-exterminating oil floating in the tank.

Her relatives, after listening to the woman's story, sworeout a warrant for the arrest of the Marine—Pake Willis Perry, 24.

Has 76 Girl Friends.

When police found him at a roadhouse early this morning he was dancing with one woman and boasting that he went with 75 others. At the same time he expressed a preference for speedy automobiles, explaining to police that he had parked his own car in Norfolk and hired another because he wanted to drive 70 miles and hour and his machine would do only 50.

His 22-year-old estranged wife, Mrs. Margaret Perry, told Patrolmen E. D. Littlejohn and W. G. Rusell that she recovered consciousness in the tank, from which she escaped by placing bricks against the inside of 8-foot walls. She is being treated at St. Vincent's Hospital for service lacerations of the head and shock.

Officers said they found her pocketbook, shoes and an article of clothing in the tank on the outskirts of the city.

Mrs. Perry told officers her husband came to her home last night and she ran out to the car to receive money she expected as a separation allowance. She said he dragged her into the car, choked her and took her away with him, threatening her life.

Beat Her, She Charges.

She said he stopped the car west of the naval base bridge and beat her unconsciousness. When she recovered she was in the tank, she said.

ePrry denied the accusation and said he had no reason for wanting to get rid of his wife.

"How about the girl you were dancing with when you were arrested?" he was asked.

"I don't particularly care for her or any of the other 75 girls I go with around here," he replied.

Perry told police he had been with a friend, the latter's wife and another woman last night on a round of roadhouses.

Bank Liability Law Argued in Maryland

Double Assessment Clause Chief Point Placed Before Appellate Court in Case Claimed to Involve Stockholders of 21 Firms.

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Md., Nov. 7.—The constitutionality, construction and effect of the Maryland law imposing double liability upon the stockholders of banks and trust companies tonight was being considered by the Court of Appeals, following argument in one of the most important cases to come before the court in years.

The principal point submitted to the appellate court is whether the double liability shall be enforced against stockholders of record at the time the bank or trust company went into receivership, or whether all persons who were stockholders "at the time the debts were contracted" are liable.

Under Maryland law the stockholders of an insolvent bank or trust company may be assessed an amount equal to the par value of the stock held by them. Recently Judge Eugene O'Dunne, in the Baltimore courts, assessed the liability against the 3,290 stockholders of the Baltimore Trust Co., a total assessment of $6,250,000 on the face value of the stock.

Appeal Considered.

The cases argued today consisted of appeals by John J. Ghinger, former State bank commissioner, from decrees of the Washington County Circuit Court, which blocked him from collecting double liability from the stockholders of record of the Hagerstown Bank & Trust Co., and the People's Banking Co., of Smithsburg.

The Washington County court's decision, from which the bank commissioner appealed, held:

That stockholders are liable to the amount of their stock for all contracts, debts and engagements incurred or contracted by the bank while they were stockholders.

That a stockholder is not liable for debts of the bank incurred prior to his acquisition of stock.

That a stockholder remains liable, after he has transferred his stock, for debts incurred or contracted by the bank while he held the stock.

That a stockholder is not liable for debts of the bank incurred by it after he has transferred his stock.

"Assets Treatment" Asked.

That the liability of stockholders, under the State law, is not an asset of the banking corporation, but should be "treated as an asset."

That a stockholder is entitled to set off against double liability a debt due him from the bank.

That the receiver of the bank is a proper party to enforce stockholders' liability.

The court held that the double liability law was not in conflict with the State constitution upon the basis of courts' ruling, but held that a construction of the law as contended by the bank commissioner would render it void and unconstitutional.

The bank commissioner contended that the liability of the stockholders is to the receiver and is an asset of the corporation for the benefit ratably of all the depositors and creditors, if necessary to pay the debts of the bank; that a stockholder cannot set off an indebtedness of the bank to him, and that the liability can be collected from stockholders of record on the date of receivership.

21 Banks Involved.

The question presented by the appeals, which were argued together, affects vitally the further liquidation of banks other than those involved. According to attorneys, 21 State banks which have closed their doors will be affected by the Appellate Court's decision.

Judge O'Dunne, in announcing his decision in the Baltimore Trust case said that "if the conclusion reached by the learned Circuit Court of Washington County in the People's Bank case correctly states the law applicable to stockholders' liability in Maryland, then the process of reasoning by which I have reached an opposite conclusion must be faulty and it will stand in need of revision."

Robert H. McCauley, J. Lloyd Harshman, Elias S. Hartle and William H. Bovey argued for the bank commissioner. D. Angle Wolfinger, John Wagaman and charges Wagaman presented the case for the two banks.

A brief on behalf of the bank commissioner was filed by John D. Hospelhornin, receiver for the Baltimore Trust Co., through Joseph C. France, Alexander Armstrong and J. Purdon Wright, attorneys.

In addition to vegetables canned and stored for winter's use, 473 pounds of other foodstuff was dried and stored. Cabbage, beets, carrots, parsnips, potatoes, pumpkins, turnips, etc., were stored in wholesale quantities.

2 Die, 1 Hurt As Airplane Falls in Va.

Pilot, 2 Women Were En Route From New York to Florida.

4 See Ship Dive From Low Altitude Into Pine Thicket.

By the Associated Press.

Lawrenceville, Va., Nov. 7.—A pilot and a woman passenger were killed and a second young woman seriously injured in the plunge of a Florida-bound commercial plane from rainy skies into a pine thicket 15 miles south of here today.

R. S. Rothsteen, of Port Washington, Long Island, N. Y., met instant death when his three-passenger monoplane somersaulted groundward from a low altitude.

In the craft, which dived headlong into the earth after plummeting through the trees, were two young women, who were identified by Brunswick County officers as Anne Mellon and Vivian Mellon, both of Williston Park, N. Y.

En Route to Florida.

The elder one, said to be about 35, died in a hospital at Roanoke Rapids, N. C., near midafternoon.

The younger one, apparently a sister of the first, was taken to a Petersburg hospital with serious injuries. Attendants said she was semiconscious and at intervals muttered, "Vivian, Vivian."

Neither the hospital nor Sheriff H. E. Valentine, of Brunswick, was able to tell which of the two women was Anne and which Vivian. Officials of the Roanoke Rapids institution said they were endeavoring to establish contact with Mrs. W. M. C. Anderson, of Williston Park, who was described as a sister of the dead woman.

Sheriff Valentine said that the plane was en route from New York to Florida when Rothsteen encountered adverse weather conditions near the Virginia-North Carolina border.

Rothsteen, however, had turned the ship about in several circles and was pointed northward when it fell from what the officer said was "a low altitude." The sheriff said four witnesses reported to him that the engine was "good."

The plane suddenly tipped downward and tumbled "end on end" to the earth. It smashed through the pines which carried the wings away and buried its nose in the ground.

The spot was about three miles from Gholsonville, Va., not far from the hamlet of White Plains.

Four men, whom Sheriff Valentine named as Henry Lynch, Charles Crowder, Stewart Clary and William Thrower, the latter a Negro, saw the fall and raced to the broken ship to pull out the three occupants.

Favorite Arias Rousingly Sung In Opera Story

Virginia Bruce Is Cast as Ambitious Prima Donna; Theater Notes.

Reprinted From Yesterday's Last Edition.

By Nelson B. Bell.

During yesterday afternoon's private preview of "Metropolitan," starring Lawrence Tibbett, in the Warner projection room in the Earle Theater Building, I was reminded of that other distinguished American barytone, John Charles Thomas, when he appeared as soloist with Dr. Kindler's National Symphony Orchestra in Constitution Hall a season or two ago.

After having responded to an extravagant number of encores, Mr. Thomas stepped again to the center of the stage and remarked simply, "Well, I came here to sing."

Tibbett might well make the same comment concerning his appearance in "Metropolitan," for he sings magnificently upon every provocation and, once or twice, without any provocation whatever, so far as the requirements of the plot are involved.

That plot, by the way, is an old and familiar friend, being a blood relative of all the other grand opera plots that have found their way to the screen since standard music came into favor among the producers, following Grace Moore's sensational triumph in "One Night of Love." Each of these studies in celluloid chromatics, of course, boasts its own embellishments and variations on the common theme of unknown musical genius' battling for recognition and a place in the operatic sun.

Everybody's Doing It!

Miss Moore has fought the good fight twice now, Nino Martini once, Dick Powell once—in slightly lighter vein—the Marx Brothers, even, have taken a whirl at it and now comes Mr. Tibbett with another adventure on the "Jack-the-Giant-Killer" motif of an unknown singer's struggle to a first night and the musical heights against seemingly insuperable odds.

It would all be pretty trite were it not for the Tibbett voice and the Tibbett performance of a role that admits of a generous amount of comedy, some light and engaging romanticism and a vagrant touch or two of dramatic tenseness and suspense.

The Tibbett voice probably never has been heard from the screen to better advantage than in this subject. The arrangement of incidents is such as to permit the introduction of many of the star's favorite arias, ballads and spirituals familiar alike to opera lovers and concert patrons.

There is no more difficult number in the repertoire of the barytone than the "Largo al Factotum"—that tongue-twisting "Figaro" aria—from "The Barber of Seville," Tibbett sings it in a rehearsal scene that is as notable for the spirited action with which he imbues it as for the tremendously effective interpretation of a number few can negotiate successfully.

George Marion Scores.

Sharing the honors of many scenes with Tibbett is that incomparable veteran character actor, George Marion, pere, who is splendidly cast as a famous conductor who has slipped into oblivion but rides back to glory with his protege's debut as the vehicle of his return to eminence. The venerable Marion has not had a part like this on the screen since his doughty old barge captain with Garbo and Marie Dressler in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's 1930 audible film version of Eugene O'Neill's "Anna Christie." He makes the irascible Perontelli a very real and very amusing character, indeed.

Hope that Jessie Ralph's role of the scrubwoman may develop into some such foil for his eccentricities as Dressler provided in "Anna Christie" will be found to be wholly unfounded. Miss Ralph is practically wasted.

Not so, however, Virginia Bruce and Alice Brady. They comport themselves efficiently as two wealthy ladies approaching grand opera from two wholly different points of view. One of them finally arrives!

The presence of Tibbett in Washington this week-end should lend the Earle Theater's engagement of "Metropolitan," beginning tomorrow, an added impetus—that and the fact that Luis Alberni, who seems to be a fixture in all pictures of this type, also is in it in another perfect assignment.

The "Bounty's" Bounty.

An emissary, heavily laden, from the office of Division Manager Carter Tate Barron, of Loew's, Inc., last evening deposited a gift copy of "Mutiny on the Bounty" on the desk of each of the Capital's dramatic editors in order that they might read the Charles Nordhoff-James Norman Hall adventure story as a check against the accuracy of the M-G-M film version soon to be seen on a loewcal Loew screen—probably at the Palace following "Barbary Coast." Having already read the book—one of the most brutally fascinating ever published, incidentally—I am one up on the Loew executive. Now that I have one of my own, I can return the copy I borrowed, with thanks second only to that which I now express to the thoughtful and generous Mr. Barron. More of this when the promised preview of the picture becomes a fact.

That Football Game.

Vivid, close-up action shots of the Notre Dame-Ohio State football game, played in Columbus, Ohio, last Saturday, now are on view at the Warner Brothers Metropolitan Theater.

These pictures are next best to having been present at the game, since they show the scoring of every touchdown—Ohio State's two in the first half of the game, Notre Dame's in the third quarter and the final scores in the last minutes of the game.

These revelatory flashes of the most sensational gridiron game of the season were made by Paramount. They will be continued on the Metropolitan screen through Saturday.

Mud-in-Your-Eye Note.

Somewhere in those Kentucky election returns there ought to be material for a crack about the last of the Bourbons, if you could just draw a bead on it!

Form New Serio-Comic Alliance

The slightly startled young man, of course, is William Powell, one of the cinema's more adroit comedians. The matter-of-fact young woman who is the cause of his obvious perturbation is Rosalind Russell, a comparative newcomer to roles of primary importance on the screen, who, for the time being at least, occupies the place in which one rather expects to find Myrna Loy. These two appear together for the first time, as pictured above, in "Rendezvous," opening tomorrow at Loew's Fox.

'Candlelight'

After a season devoted largely to the tenser, starker aspects of the dramaturgic art, the Columbia Players last evening opened their fourteenth season with Siegfried Geyer's "Candlelight," for which P. G. Wodehouse prepared the English adaptation, a play with brilliant dialogue, amusing situations and opportunity for histrionic display.

In a sort of Lunt-Fontanne combine, Robert M. Miller and Dorothea Lewis carried the burden of the situations arising from a double mistaken identity, Mr. Miller, as the prince, impersonating a valet, contributed a performance which quite outshines anything he has ever done.

Miss Lewis, always the contributor of a carefully considered delineation, is seen to advantage as the lady, masquerading as a parlor maid, who mistakes valet for prince, but finally decides the error one not to be rectified.

The prince himself is played by Norman Rose. Depicting one who has a weakness for the ladies—when their husbands are absent—Mr. Rose gave a fine performance. The two immediate weaknesses of the prince are played by Juliet Edes Alves and Eileen Fowler. Edward Godsall, as the priest's chauffeur; Wade Robinson, as the furious Baron von Rischenheim, and Joe Bourne, as a waiter, are excellently cast and do nobly by the small parts assigned them.

Special mention for Jane Lasater Ruby's setting, and Orris Holland, assisted by Bertha Cunningham, deserves plenty of commendation for his direction.

"I'll bet you say that to all the girls, Mr. Powell"

Did you hear the great news about William Powell's new picture?

The Management of this theatre has been getting an earful of film promises from Hollywood producers for years. We listen to them, then we wait to see the picture and then we give you the Loew-down!

So, when they said: "Watch for Bill Powell's next picture 'RENDEZVOUS' (with love!)" we said: "Okay" and waited for the picture to arrive.

Well, here's one time that Hollywood was too modest. We've seen the picture and, honestly, it's grand! We think it's the merriest of all the Powell mystery romances. He goes gaily crashing through a thousand dangers in his delightful manner, giving you loads of laughs. And Rosalind Russell is just the kind of girl for Bill's kind of man.

We're not going to be modest about Bill Powell's "Rendezvous." We're proud to bring it to you and we tell you with the utmost sincerity that you'll thank us for having called this unusual entertainment to your attention.

"RENDEZVOUS" (with love!) is a special William Powell starring hit from the M-G-M Studios!

Gallico Visits The Point, Discovers Cheers Mean Something!

By Paul Gallico.

NEW YORK, Nov. 7.—It would be hard to describe what it sounds like to hear the Cadet Corps at the United States Military Academy at West Point, giving mass cheers in their enormous mess hall, at a pre-game football rally, and I have no intention of trying. It is something that should be experienced, and it is an experience.

You have all heard them cheer at their football games out in the open, and the small gray patch stuck like a label onto the side of any stadium they happen to occupy can give forth startling volumes of sound from their short, staccato barks of encouragement to the truly startling roar that issues from them when a touchdown is scored by their team, and it seems as though the very sky were reverberating to it. The same sound heard in the confines of even as large and roomy a hall as the one at The Point simply raises your hair.

Cheers and football songs are rather disillusioning things when seen on paper. The cheers are arrant, gibberish and too absurd for words, and the lyrics of the songs are one and all trite poetry about fighting for the Old School, or loving the Old School, or never forgetting her or the colors, or doing something to the other School such as tearing through their line, or rolling up the score, or smashing down the tacklers. You have heard or read dozens of them, and I will warrant never found an original line or idea in any of them. But by George, you listen to that Cadet Corps shout one in th mess hall, and I want to tell you, the thing lives.

It means something. The rollicking march music of the melody, of course, stirs your blood, but even the old, well-worn words come to life, and take on meaning when the straight-backed kids with clear eyes cry them out, or sing them at the tops of their lungs.

AT such times the old songs are no longer old, but something new and stimulating, as each boy looks into his heart and finds there the primitives, so simple, and yet so wonderful to discover—this is my school; I love it. These are my companions; I would die for them. Together we stand against the world. Here amongst us is safety. We are the salt of the earth. Nowhere else are there any such as we. How wonderful it is to be banded here together against whatever may come. Strength, strength, strength! Pour it out in song.

The occasion was the rally before the Pitt game, which the Army will play in Pittsburgh Saturday. And I envied those kids because they were able really to care. They seemed to care terribly whether their team won or lost, and I, who perhaps never did, and certainly do not now, truly envied them. Sitting at the mess table with the cadets and the cheer leaders, worrying over whether my talk was going to please the youngsters, I still found time to look back into my own life and wonder whether I had ever cared that much for victory or defeat. And for a moment I caught a glimpse of a past so long dead that I shuddered at the dry rattle of it. There once was a boy who thought that the sun rose and set on his boat, and whether it won or lost.

Why isn't it possible to hold that? The cheer leader who led the rally spoke to the corps with his eyes blazing and his body as taut as a bowstring with purpose, and he was saying that Army could win, that Army was a jinx buster, that Army would go down there to Pittsburgh and knock the hell out of Pitt, and the cadets got up on their hind legs and yelled affirmation, and the great hall was alive and throbbing with the glory of youth.

WE can! We will! We've got the stuff! They can't beat us! Our team is the best team on earth! There is no defeat or sorrow! All things come to those who want it hard enough! Fight! Fight! Does it always work? I wish I knew. I wish I were that lithe young cheer leader high on the platform, aflame with belief. I wish I didn't know what I know. I wish I weren't so damned smart and bitter. I wish that I could go

Pixlee Plans Wide-Open Attack

Tihila, New Fullback, to Start; Rathjen Out, Salturelli Plays.

Ray Gainer Is Leader of Rivals, Who Have Yet to Win a Game.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

A PATCHED-UP George Washington eleven, playing the old theme song, "Try, Try Again," goes into action against Davis-Elkins tonight at Griffith Stadium, and the boys are going to shoot the works again, hopeful of obtaining better results than they did against Rice last week.

Satisfied with the wide-open play of his men against Rice, which netted 425 yards from scrimmage and 24 first downs, Head Coach Jim Pixlee has decided to use the same brand tonight regardless of the weather. Spread plays, abundantly sprinkled with deception, will be the keynote of the attack which "Tuffy" Leemans probably will lead.

George Washington will exhibits a new fullback in the person of "Big Nig" Tihila, a 205-pound individual who goes as well on a heavy field as he does on dry footing. In practice he has been a combination line-cracker and broken-field runner. His huge bulk propels him through the enemy frowards in a manner reminiscent of Don Bomba, and out in the clear he is only a few pegs below Leemans.

Salturelli to Play.

Another new starter in the lineup will be Armondo Salturelli, who is supplanting injured Red Rathjen at center. Salturelli, a sophomore, is light, but fast afoot and an accurate passer. His work is of vital importance in the new plays which depend on good passing from center for a good start.

Although Davis-Elkins has not won a game this season it is far from a pushover and an upset victory over the Colonials would go far toward atoning for past mistakes. The Mountaineers will be outweighed by an average of six pounds, but they are fast and rely on deception more than power.

Gainer Spearhead.

Ray Gainer, 170-pound fullback who was responsible for his team's victory over G. W. in basketball last winter, is the spearhead of the attack. Gainer runs, passes and kicks and frequently goes out into the flat zone to receive passes. Underwood, a 205-pound tackle, and Goldberg, 200-pound quarterback, are the team's defensive stars.

A preliminary game between teams from the Junior Colonial League will start tonight's festivities at 7 o'clock. The varsity game kick-off is scheduled for 8 o'clock.

St. John's to Meet N. Y. U, Next Season

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, Md., Nov. 7.—The St. John's 1936 football schedule, announced today by Coach Riggs, presents two powerful opponents at its outset. New York University, a newcomer to the schedule, will be met following the battle with Maryland on September 28. The remaining adversaries were faced this season.

Two open dates, October 17 and November 7, probably will be filled, Riggs said, although he turned down a bid from City College of New York on their field.

Riggs said the 1937 schedule already was taking shape, with Army, N. Y. U., Maryland and American University included as opponents.

Volcanic Ashes Help Beat American Nine

Tokyo, Nov. 7 (AP).—Under a shower of volcanic ash, a barnstorming American amateur baseball team opened its Japanese tour today by losing, 5 to 4, to Meiji University.

The volcanic ash, from a violent eruption of famous Mount Aasama, caused weird light effects that were almost as hard on the players as the ashes that got into their eyes. The shower was so thick spectators covered their heads with handkerchiefs and newspapers.

Central Choice Today Over Roosevelt

Is Heavily Favored to Win, but Rough Riders Feel Tide May Turn.

By John R. Vosburgh.

A ROUTINE meeting of the Public High School Football Society will be held at 3:30 p. m. today at Central Stadium. All members are urged to attend. A short skit will be presented by the Central and Roosevelt football teams and a good time is expected to be had by all, especially the Central backfield.

In view of Central being generally considered the best team in the interhigh series and Roosevelt probably the worst—to date, anyway—little Mr. Billy Richardson and his ball-carrying cohorts of Central seem due for a big afternoon. Central has wiped up Tech and Western, scoring 31 points to none for its opponents. Roosevelt has absorbed consecutive beatings from Tech and Eastern, which scored a total of 45 points to none for the Rough Riders.

Obviously, it takes no Sherlock Holmes to forecast the probable outcome. On the other hand, there is a feeling in the Roosevelt camp that the Rough Riders have been pretty well tangled up in their harness all season and are due for a swing free today.

Forward Wall Intact.

Despite loss of two backfield regulars and three reserves in the line, Coach Lynn Woodworth still has his big forward wall intact. Such able individual players as Spiro Kolius, Julius Lewis, Francis Beamer, Frank Witt and Gus Papanicolas raised no little havoc with both Eastern and Tech. With all-high consideration always a possibility for a player on the lowliest team, this same contingent and others form a considerable defensive problem which Central must solve.

In the backfield, Woodworth is forced to fill the vacancies left by Joe Bovello and 216-pound Jake Fleischman, relegated to the sidelines by ineligibility. Loyal Grimes, hard-running reserve back, will start in place of Fleischman and Paul Richards in place of Bovello. Quarterback Dick Grant, who had been expected to be lost by ineligibility, came through to pass a make-up test and will start at his customary post. Joe Kollyer will take the other backfield assignment.

Central trounced the Rough Riders, 28 to 6, last year.

Famed Richmond Goal Post to Go If Tigers Triumph

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., Nov. 7.—Richmond's police were given indirect notice today that Hampden-Sydney's Tigers intend to carry away the goal posts if their football team whips the University of Richmond Spiders in the stadium here Saturday.

Although they heard about the riot and several student casualties which followed the attempt of victorious Georgetown to carry home the goal posts a week ago, those Tigers are nonetheless determined to pull down the uprights if they triumph Saturday, Charlie Bernier, Hampden-Sydney coach, told Coach Glenn Thistlethwaite, of the Spiders.

"The students have informed me that they plan to take the goal posts regardless of last Saturday's riot after the Georgetown game, Bernier said. "That's the custom, and if we win, you may count on 300 Hampden-Sydney boys after those uprights."

Thistlethwaite withheld comment.

Southeastern In Line for Laurels

Is Likely to Top Southern Conference in Series This Season.

By the Associated Press.

RICHMOND, Va., Nov. 7.—It looked today as if those gay young fellows in the Southeastern conference would give their seniors in the southern another whipping this year in their series of football games, although the two circuits are deadlocked now at four victories each.

Two more games are coming up, with the Southeastern representatives odds-on favorites. Unless Clemson stops Alabama at Tuscaloosa Saturday or South Carolina scores an upset at the expense of Florida on December 7 at Tampa the Southern will have to wait another year to teach those Southeastern divorcees a lesson.

Rallied to Top Vols.

Duke's disappointing failure to get by either Georgia Tech or Auburn spoiled the Southern's rosy chances, although the Blue Devils rallied nicely to whip Tennessee.

Deadlocked now at four victories apiece, the closeness of the battle between the two circuits is reflected in the fact that the Southern representatives have scored 96 points while the Southeastern members counted 95 in interconference games.

The Southeastern got off on the right foot when Tulane rolled over Virginia Military, 44 to 0. North Carolina's Tarheels, with the first demonstration of their great power, evened the count for the Southern by overwhelming Tennessee, 38 to 13.

Ga. Tech Beat Duke.

Then the Southeastern rose up on its haunches and Georgia Tech slapped down Duke, 6 to 0, on the same afternoon that Georgia whipped North Carolina State at Raleigh, 13-0, the Southeastern went three up when Auburn beat Duke, 7 to 0.

Three victories in a row put the Southern back in the running, but with only an outside chance to get a tie for the season's work. North Carolina subdued Georgia Tech, 19 to 0; Maryland defeated Florida, 20 to 6, and Duke, the following week, squared the series with a 19-to-6 triumph over Tennessee.

Now it's up to Clemson and South Carolina.

Dean to Spur Probe, but Urge U. C. L. A. Bar Mysterious Key

By the Associated Press.

AMARILLO, Tex., Nov. 7.—Well, it seems mysterious Ted Key—of the Texas Keys—may have done about his last bit of football backing for the University of California at Los Angeles.

It seems that way because Dean E. R. Miller, U. C. L. A.'s head sleuth in the "family tree" investigation of the controversial fullback's eligibility, is pretty positive tonight about one thing:

The Ted Key of U. C. L. A. can turn in football uniform No. 35.

Said the dean:

"Upon my return to California, I will recommend that Key be withheld from further football competition—unless additional evidence is uncovered."

Dean Miller confessed, however, he still is not certain whether the R. F. (Ted) Key at U. C. L. A. is the man he says he is, or his brother, Clois (Shorty) Key.

So, the rambling dean said, he will continue to browse around amongst the branches of the Key family tree.

The "Shorty" Key was some shakes as a fullback for the Texas School of Mines at El Paso several years back, and if their fullback is the same man, U. C. L. A. officials say they want no more of him. He would be ineligible because of an extended college pigskin "course."

As the dean moved about Texas today, the fullback in question broke his silence through a friend to say he'll be willing to talk when Miller returns from Texas—not before.

The friend, who added to the mystery angles by withholding his name, said Key expects to be cleared of the charges of entering U. C. L. A. under the credentials of his cousin, Shorty.

While the player remained in hiding, reportedly at Santa Monica, Miller said:

"In view of the evidence I have found so far, I am convinced that our Ted Key is ineligible, but I want to find out everything I can about this case before I return to Los Angeles."

He had his pockets crammed with contradictory statements—some saying Ted was Ted and others saying just as positively that Ted was Shorty.

The boy's strongest defense crumbled, the dean said, when Superintendent R. E. Vaughn, Panhandle High School superintendent, looked at his picture and said he was not the R. F. (Ted) Key, who was graduated from Panhandle High School.

Bair in Battle For Scoring Honors

By the Associated Press.

RICHMOND, Va., Nov. 7.—When the Nation's high scoring honors are dished out at the end of the season, Randolph-Macon's Jimmy Bair, a fine running back, may have his finger in the pie.

With the exception of Ray Zeh, Western Reserve fullback, no college ball carrier in the United States has topped Bair's total of 72 points and no competitor has scored more touchdowns than the even dozen counted by the Randolph-Macon star.

Zeh has scored only 11 but 20 perfectly kicked points after touchdown raised his total to 86, nicely ahead of the pack but within striking distance of Bair and Eddie Stanley, of Williams, each of whom has 72 points.

Bair is well ahead of the Southeastern, Big Ten and Southwestern pace-setters, each of whom has 54 points, and far in front of the Southern Conference leader, Ace Parker, of Duke, who has 48 points.

With the crucial games coming up for most of the leading schools in the Nation. The schedule favors Randolph-Macon and Bair. American University may cause trouble Saturday but the Jackets are rated too strong and Jimmy should help his scoring to some extent. The following week ith Little Gallaudet as the foe he should show to good advantage but touchdowns will be very much at a premium in the last game of the season when Randolph-Macon entertains Hampden-Sydney.

Second in the State race comes "Foots" Dickerson, Virginia Tech's line plunging fullback who picked up 27 points against South Carolina to stretch his total to 40. But against teams of the caliber which the Gobblers have to face the rest of the way, Dickerson was rated hardly an outside chance to overhaul Bair.

Third place in the State scoring race is shared by Bill Formwalt, Hampden-Sydney's great end, and Harry Martin, Virginia's triple threater, each with 27 points, while Wat Clark, of V. M. I. slips into fifth position with 25 points.

Other leaders are sam Keys, Emory and Henry, 24; Bobby Vaughan, Richmond, 19, and Joe Arnold, Washington and Lee; Paliscak, Randolph-Macon; Bill Dyer, Emory and Henry, and John Matheny, William and Mary, each with 18 points.

Addition of 65 Acres Improves Cup Course

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Warrenton, Va., Nov. 7.—The Virginia Gold Cup race course on the Broadview estate, owned by Mr. and Mrs. Aexander B. Hagner, Warrenton, will be improved by the addition of 65 acres recently purchased from Maj. Edwin H. Gibson, of Richmond.

The parcel, originally part of the Broadview farm when owned by the late William F. Wilbur, was retained by his widow, Mrs. Frederick W. Haserick, with an idea of building a residence.

Monarch Swell Wins Ribbon At Garden

Dick Entry Beat Favored Carnation Rainbow in Great Upset.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Nov. 7.—A. B. Dick, jr., master of the Dicksfield Farm, of Gurnee, Ill., won his third blue ribbon of the National Horse Show in Madison Square Garden this afternoon when he drove his 4-year-old gelding, Monarch Swell, to victory over a large field of harness ponies not exceeding 14.2 hands, which had not won more than six first places at any recognized show.

The surprise of the class was the failure of Carnation Rainbow, owned by Frances Dodge, of Rochester, Mich., to get into the money.

Charles T. Fisher's Dixiana Farm, of Lexington, Ky., put across another winner with the stable's five-galted gelding, George Gwinn, in the class limited for 4-year-olds and under.

Miss Dodge won her fourth blue ribbon, with Etta Kett, a 6-year-old chestnut mare, beating the Dixiana Farm's Miss America, last year's three-gaited champion under 15.2 hands. Samuel Schiffer's Kilkare Chief, of Elberon, N. J., placed third.

Carpenter Scores.

R. R. M. Carpenter, of Montchanin, Del., showed the leading qualified hunter, carrying up to 160 pounds, in Modernistic. The red ribbon went to Sand Den, representing Mrs. Ellworth Augustus, of Willoughby, Ohio.

Carpenter and the Dixiana hung up their second victories of the afternoon when Catalans Lad defeated a large field of hunters, shown at a walk, trot and hand gallop, in the silks of the Montchain (Del.) sportsman, and American Jane walked off with the blue for saddle horses over 14.2 hands and not exceeding 15.2 for the Kentucky-owned stable.

10 Navy Men Are Injury Victims

Coach Hamilton Drills His Squad in Secret for Penn Game.

Will Not Revamp Team; Asserts 'We Haven't Gotten Breaks.'

By the Associated Press.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Nov. 7.—With ten of the Naval Academy varsity football squad on the invalid list, Tom Hamilton, head coach, today ran the Midshipmen through a rough individual practice preparing to renew the 47-year-old series with Pennsylvania on Saturday.

Hamilton, woh has been grooming his charges in sceret all week, said he was spending the time on fundamental and general work. Today was given over to blocking, tackling and defense against "B" and Plebe teams running Pennsylvania plays.

"We are following the same line as in the past," Hamilton said. "Our training has been no different than right along. I think we are developing. We have hit teams—the best in the country—right when they were at their peak. You can say what you please, but we haven't made or gotten the breaks of the game. We have made mistakes that have cost us the ball game."

Not Revamping Teams.

Hamilton said he was not revamping his teams during the secret drills or changing the position of the players.

"We are going along, playing football," he said. "We have made no changes in the line-up of the teams, except where injuries necessitate replacements. Ten of the players are injured and it is problematical whether they will be in shape by Saturday."

Charles J. Reiman, a halfback, and John C. Hunter, a left guard, have been moved up from the "B" squad to the varsity to strengthen the material in the positions.

The Navy mentor said he considered Pennsylvania "a dangerous team, with power, speed, a good passing attack and a backfield averaging 190 pounds."

"Pennsylvania is one of the best teams in the East, regardless," he said. "It has shown its power on certain Saturdays. They ran up 34 points on Columbia and have a better record against Princeton than Navy."

The Navy-Pennsylvania series began in 1888, with the wins standing 10 for the Quakers and 9 for Navy; one game was a tie. Last year Navy won, 17 to 0.

The Parade of the All-Stars of U. S. Colleges

Tulane University—Its All-Time Honor Roll

Flournoy, Zimmerman, Banker, Oustanding Among Backs.

By George Trevor,
Nationally Known Football Authority.

THROW out the life line! Here comes the all-time Green Tidal Wave sweeping everything before it. Old Tulane was founded in 1834 at pleasant New Orleans, home of crab gumbo, oysters a la Rockefeller, tasty pralines and heady Sazerac cocktails. From this languorous wistaria-scented environment have sprung some of the greatest football teams and players the deep South has known.

Ever since 1893 football has been on a solid basis at Tulane, but it wasn't until the last decade that the Green Wave joined Alabama's Crimson Tide as the two dominating forces on Southern gridirons. In 1925, '28, '30, '31, and '34 Tulane was either the champion or co-holder of the Dixie title.

Charles Peggie Flournoy, unrivaled as a punter, was the wheelhorse of the unbeaten 1925 team which crushed Northwestern 25 to 0. He could do everything expected of a great back and got able cooperation from Lester Lautenschlaeger, who ran the eleven with flawless judgment and rifled passes to his colleague. They formed a great tandem.

Don Zimmerman and Willis Banker were Tulane's two most spectacular ball-carriers. They called Banker the blond blizzard. In three years of football he never wore a head guard, never called for time and played 60 minutes of every game. He did all the kicking, most of the passing and blocked like a demon for little Ike Armstrong, a pony-gaited back. Banker's uninterrupted 80-yard march to a touchdown in the closing minutes of the 1929 Georgia game ranks with the South's greatest individual exploits. He gained from 3 to 5 yards on every rush in that sequence. Banker is vice-president of an oil company today.

Don Zimmerman weighed 10 pounds more than Banker, was a shade faster and even more elusive. His dramatic passes to Vernon Haynes repeatedly brought victory to the Olive and Blue. No other receiver but Haynes could have made some of those miraculous completions. He had fish hooks for fingers. Zimmerman was the Lone Eagle of the 1932 team, single-stuck on his horse, Greatorex, after the gelding had stumbled while landing after the fifteenth jump. He was forced to pull up later. Bagatelle was withdrawn after he had been left some 100 lengths behind after two trips around the course.

The time of 6 minutes and 24 seconds was the slowest in the eight year history of the event, and the attendance was the smallest of the Maryland season, although the clubhouse was crowded.

Bassett rode a heady race on Wild Son. While What Have You, Well Played, Royal Thomas and Greatorex were staging a struggle for the doubtful honor of setting the pace, Bassett was holding his mount under stout restraint while steadying him over the jumps and steering him out of trouble.

Drapeau Finished Strong.

Always within easy striking distance, Bassett gradually let out the wraps with a half-mile to go and Wild Son bounded to take command with two fences to go. From that point to the finish the winning margin alone was in doubt. L. E. Stoddard, jr., rode a smashing race during the latter stages to bring Drapeau into second money and A. Fowler held Well Played together long enough to save the third award.

The feature flat race of the afternoon brought only a vest pocket field to the post. Tabitha, Soon Over and Maeriel accepted the issue and they finished in that order after a series of splashes over the mile and 70 yards course. The "hunch" of playing the longest shot in a three-horse race proved the right one, for Tabitha was the outsider at an $8.90 mutuel.

The winning daily double combine of Italian Harry and Challephen produced a mutuel of $124.60.

Italian Harry, ridden by Ray Booker, the diminutive colored boy, found the muddy track to his liking in the first race and scored an easy victory. Mary's May was second and Best Policy third in the field of eight. None of the well-played horses figured in the serious running. Mary's May opened a long lead along the back stretch but tired steadily thereafter. Italian Harry paid a $21.70 mutuel.

Vanderbilt Horse Wins.

The Vanderbilt Stable added another victory to its long string in the second race when Atholton outclassed a field of a dozen sprinters. The son of the mud-running Dunlin took command swinging for the stretch and had plenty of daylight between him and My Kin at the end. All Scarlet, the favorite; was third. Atholton, ridden by Sammy Renick, paid $15.20.

Jockey Alfred Robertson narrowly escaped serious injury when he fell from Ebony Arrow soon after the break. He suffered a cut on his ankle that forced him to cancel his mounts at least for the day.

Mudders at good odds continued to hold sway in the third race. Challephen, a colt from the Brannecastle Farm, opened a lead during the early running and failed to be caught. Galmica overcame some early interference to barely take second money from Bootless, a member of the favored Bradley entry. Challephen rewarded the faithful with a $16.70 mutuel.

EBONY ARROW	110	7	9	Lost rider				Robertson	11.20

†Mrs. E. L. Trueman-R. Parr entry.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ATHOLTON, $15.20, $6.40, $4.70; MY KIN, $8.90, $6.00; ALL SCARLET, $3.30.

ATHOLTON, at home in the going and a keen factor in the early stages, assumed command with a rush when reaching the home stretch, then drew out at will at the closing stages. MY KIN had nice speed while setting the pace, came out into the firmer footing when reaching the home stretch and held on gamely after being headed. ALL SCARLET improved his position on the outside and held on well after reaching contention. IN FRONT, forced to race in the deepest footing, could not threaten in the final drive. BLACK MISCHIEF lost ground all the way. SHORT SKIRT began slowly and could not threaten. ABSCONDER began tiring after half a mile. NIGHT COURT stopped badly. EBONY ARROW was caught in tight quarters in the first sixteenth and lost her rider.

THIRD RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $900; allowances. For 2-year-olds. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 2:35. Off at 2:36. Winner, Brann Castle Farm's b. c. (2), by Challenger II—Diphenelon. Trained by R. Roberts. Value to winner, $650; second, $150; third, $75; fourth, $25. Time, 0:24 1-5, 0:48 3-5, 1:14 2-5, 1:41, 1:46 2-5.

†E. R. Bradley entry.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CHALLEPHEN, $16.70, $7.60, $3.90; GALMICA, $5.40, $3.10; BOOTLESS (entry), $2.40.

CHALLEPHEN, away nicely and having good speed, met repeated efforts from BOOTLESS in the first seven furlongs, then drew out into an easy lead in the last quarter mile. GALMICA, pinched back soon after the start, worked his way into contention steadily, came through on the inside and outfinished BOOTLESS. Latter, full of run and kept close to the winner early, failed to rally when placed to punishment. ABBOT'S TRICK closed with good courage, but could not threaten. WASTER passed tiring horses in the late stages. TRANSPORTER dropped back badly approaching the final turn, then was held safe. BOW AND ARROW tired after six furlongs.

FOURTH RACE—Three miles. Purse, $1,000. The Master of Fox Hounds Steeplechase. For hunters. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 3:00. Off at 3:01. Winner, Mrs. M. D. P. Somerville's br. or blk. h. (4), by Son-in-Law—Wild Mint. Trained by S. L. Burch. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 6:24.

†Untermyer entry.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—WILD SON, $5.00, $4.60, $3.30; DRAPEAU (entry), $6.60, $4.10; WELL PLAYED, $4.60.

WILD SON, strongly reserved for two miles, went into contention after clearing the fifteenth fence, took command at the seventeenth jump and held away thereafter to win with much in reserve. DRAPEAU has been improving his position after a mile and a half, fenced nicely, but could not threaten the winner. WELL PLAYED, a strong factor from the beginning, jumped cleanly at all the fences, but could not stay after gaining a slight lead at the fifteenth fence. ROYAL THOMAS, under a choking pull for the first mile and a half, took command under sufferance at the tenth fence and held on well. WHAT HAVE YOU had good speed for two miles, then tired. ARGONAUTE II tired in the last six furlongs after going forwardly early. TOY MAKER was always outrun and F. Powers lost stirrup irons. GREATOREX was pulled up after the fifteenth fence and BAGATELLE was pulled up going to the same jump.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $900; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won ridden out; place, driving. Went to post at 3:33. Off at 3:33½. Winner, Everglade Stable's b. c. (4), by Dodge—On Time. Trained by S. W. Ward. Value to winner, $650; second, $150; third, $75; fourth, $25. Time, 0:23 2-5, 0:47 3-5, 1:13 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—DARTLE, $4.80, $3.00, $2.60; LADY HIGLOSS, $3.00, $2.80; ZAY, $3.60.

DARTLE, a keen factor from the start, engaged LADY HIGLOSS when reaching the turn, took command after being straightened into the home stretch, then came out under urging. LADY HIGLOSS raced HEADIN' HOME into early submission, was unable to race clear, and she weakened after being overtaken. ZAY raced well placed, swung wide into the home stretch and just lasted to stall off SCATTER BRAIN. Latter could not make up any ground when placed to a hard drive. HEADIN' HOME fell back midway of the turn, then failed to rally when saving a lot of ground entering the home stretch. CLUB HOUSE was outrun.

SIXTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,200. For all ages. Start good. Won handily; place, driving. Went to post at 3:58. Off at 4:00. Winner, A. J. Sackett's c. f. (3), by Victorian—Bas Bleu. Trained by W. J. Hirsch. Value to winner, $850; second, $200; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:23 3-5, 0:48, 1:13 3-5, 1:40 3-5, 1:45 4-5.

MAERIEL	103½	2	3	3	3	3	3	Litzenberger	2.65

Two-dollar mutuels paid—TABITHA, $8.90 (no place or show tickets sold).

TABITHA raced strongly back of SOON OVER after reaching the back stretch, challenged strongly midway of the final turn, then drew out cleverly after taking command in the closing furlongs. SOON OVER had nice speed while setting the pace, was shaken up when challenged, but was no match for the winner. MAERIEL could not improve his position, although racing stoutly at the end.

SEVENTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $900; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:25. Off at 4:26. Winner, K. N. Gilpin's ch. h. or br. c. (3), by Dunlin—Lady Emmeline. Trained by C. M. Felger. Value to winner, $650; second, $150; third, $75; fourth, $25. Time, 0:24 2-5, 0:49 2-5, 1:15 2-5, 1:42, 1:47 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BUCK LANGHORNE, $9.40, $4.40, $3.30; CHURCH CALL, $4.30, $2.70; FOGARTY, $3.40.

BUCK LANGHORNE, nicely handled after outrunning his field to the first turn, withstood strong opposition from CELEBRANT in the first six furlongs, moved clear at the last turn, then under tenacious handling outstayed CHURCH CALL. Latter, permitted to gain her best stride after reaching the back stretch, went to the leaders readily, was carried wide into the home stretch and Wright outrode Walker when it came to a drive. FOGARTY began slowly, improved his position rapidly after settling in full stride and came with a tremendous rush. DONA DULCIN went prominently and had no mishaps. MOUSE TRAP weakened after six furlongs. CELEBRANT was used up chasing the winner early, others were badly outrun.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $900; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 4:51. Off at 4:51½. Winner, H. L. Straus' b. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—PETEE BLUE, $22.90, $8.00, $6.50; POMPOSITY, $6.20, $4.70; OVERSTIMULATE, $5.30.

PETEE BLUE, going in his best form, opened up a long lead when leaving the back stretch, was kept under urging and held away until the end. POMPOSITY, hard ridden from the start, went up on the inside on the back stretch, but could not threaten the winner. OVERSTIMULATE bumped U DEMON at the first turn, went forwardly for six furlongs, then weakened. MANAGER BILL was unable to menace at any stage. MAJOR GENERAL was outrun. FLYING DERE did not fancy the footing. U DEMON was bumped and knocked off stride at the first turn. He failed to rally thereafter.

V.P.I. Linemen Primed for Wolfpack

Tilson Says Jones, Lodge and Others Will Stop N. C. State Backs.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

BLACKSBURG, Va., Nov. 7.—"Tex" Tilson, Virginia Tech line coach, believes that his hustling set of forwards will be able to match the play of North Carolina State's fine line when the two teams meet in their twentieth gridiron clash Saturday at Portsmouth.

Though the Wolfpack line held North Carolina's high-stepping Tar Heels in check, forcing the Chapel Hill steam roller to take to the air, Tech's charging forewall has its own stars to match Steve Sabol, Mac Cara and Vince Farrar, State's ace linemen.

Dave Jones has played a steady, smart game all season. He has experience, a cool head, nice speed for a 185 pounder, and has stood out in most of the games the Gobblers have played this year. Jones is a prominent candidate for all-State honors, just as Sabol is among Carolina pivot men.

Tilson believes that Ben Dodge and Art Robison, a pair of nifty 200-pound tackles, will hold their own against Vince Farrar and other fine Wolfpack tackles. Dodge was a mighty factor in Tech's win over Washington and Lee two weeks ago. Robison was at his best against Maryland and South Carolina. He is a boy who strikes with a shock to his charge, both as a blocker and as a tackler.

Shockey Injured.

Carol Shockey, Tech's promising sophomore wingman, will be out of the game because of an injury received in the South Carolina game. Tilson still has Lloyd Doxey, Capt. Louis Fittro, Joe Russell and Bob Priode for flank duty. These boys are capable. Fittro has shown brilliant flashes the past two years, though he probably has not quite come up to Cara at his best.

Brokers' Loans Rise $11,000,000 in Week

By the Associated Press.

Loans on securities to brokers and dealers held by weekly reporting member banks in New York City amounted to $839,000,000 during the week ended November 6, representing an increase of $11,000,000 for the week. The loans for the week ended November 7, 1934, were $576,000,000.

Highlights and Background Of Financial News and Trends

Profit-Taking Sales Stem Upward Rush of Stock Prices; Utility Bonds Strong; Cotton Up 60 Cents a Bale.

By Frank MacMillen,
Associated Press Financial Writer.

New York, Nov. 7.—Stock market traders trimmed off their profits today after Wednesday's active bull thrust. Most of the list closed mildly lower, with a scattering of higher-priced issues off a point or a little more, but final prices did not lack plus signs. A few issues advanced against the trend, especially the mail orders, some of the aircraft and rubber issues, and a few specialties.

The Associated Press average dipped .2 of a point at 53.7. Activity was brisk, especially at the opening of trading when the tone was firm to strong and the tape lagged 2 to 3 minutes behind transactions. The day's turnover in the stock exchange, however, at 2,800,310 shares, compared with the 3,000,000 mark established in the previous session.

Short Selling Appears.

The early buying wavelet subsided rather quickly to be replaced by unevenness as profit-taking and some short selling came into the market, but the downward tilt was not very definite until the final hour, when softness in a few spots spread to the body of the list and activity picked up.

Grains, like stocks, behaved indifferently, but cotton lifted 35 to 60 cents a bale. At Chicago wheat futures were ⅜ of a cent to 1⅜ cents a bushel lower and corn was down ¼ to ¾ of a cent.

Firmness in power company loans was the principal feature of an otherwise rather uneven bond market. United States Government obligations gave a little ground. Italian issues lost early improvement, when it became known that Germany was prepared to embargo shipment of war materials to Italy.

Utility Decision Late.

News of the decision by the Federal District Court at Baltimore, declaring against the legality of the public utility holding company act, coming in the final few minutes of trading, was too late to do more than stiffen a few of the utility stocks.

Dealings on the West Coast after the New York close were reported to have produced higher prices for utilities than the final levels here. The third quarter earnings report of Niagara Hudson Power Co., showing profit of 7 cents a common share, compared with 4 cents in the same period of 1934, was also encouraging to followers of the group.

Mail order shares consistently bucked the market current as Montgomery Ward reported October sales of $36,897,447, the best month's business in its history.

The declaration of an extra dividend of 50 cents on Loew's stock in addition to the regular 50-cent quarterly disbursement encouraged traders to bid that issue up more than 2 points for a while and the close was better than a point higher at 49¾.

Butter at New Top, Eggs Low for Year

Chicago, Nov. 7 (AP).—Butter futures climbed to new high prices for the year today while egg futures broke to new lows.

November storage standards of butter sold up to a high of 29½ cents, closing ⅛ below this figure. December butter went to a four-year high of 29⅝, selling ⅛ lower than this at the close. The session on the mercantile exchange was very active and trading in both butter and eggs was heavy.

Butter has been advancing steadily in recent weeks, because of heavy withdrawals from storage and reports of sharp decreases in production throughout the country. Extras in the cash market sold today at 29¾ cents per pound, an advance of more than 6 cents over the 1935 low touched July 1 and 1¾ cents higher than a year ago.

November refrigerator standards of eggs closed at 22¾ cents today. Fresh graded firsts were quoted at 30@30½.

Darby Petroleum Makes Deal With Tide Water

New York, Nov. 7 (AP).—Darby Petroleum corporation has arranged to reacquire 158,306 shares of its stock held by the Tide Water Oil Co., it was announced today.

In exchange for the shares the Darby company will transfer to Tide Water East Texas properties comprising 28 wells located on oil and gas leases covering approximately 210,000 acres, and certain undeveloped leases covering 1,200 acres in New Mexico and Southwestern Texas. The Darby company proposes to retire the reacquired stock.

Credit Policy Is Held Vital Reserve Duty

Szymczak Explains New Powers of Board Under 1935 Banking Act.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cleveland, Ohio, Nov. 7.—Speaking before the Cleveland chapter, American Institute of Banking, tonight at the Carter Hotel, M. S. Szymczak, of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System, emphasized what he regarded as two important changes effected in the reserve system by the new banking legislation.

"First," he said, "there are the provisions that fix responsibility more definitely for the determination and direction of national credit policy through control of open market operations, of discount rates, and of reserve requirements. Second there are the provisions that broaden the classes of member bank assets eligible as security for loans from Reserve banks, and encourage local banks to meet a wider range of credit needs in their communities."

Discussing the Nation's credit policy, he said:

"When the Federal Reserve System was established it was realized that for certain activities, particularly those related to local banking conditions, a regional organization was necessary. Only in this way could the system meet local bank needs in a country as large as the United States, with economic conditions varying so much from one section to another. Each regional bank would have intimate knowledge of developments in agriculture, commerce and industry in its district and of the district's special credit needs and problems.

Policies Co-ordinated.

"The principle was also established by the original Federal Reserve Act that under the authority of the act and of regulations of the board in Washington the reserve banks should have final responsibility in their dealings with member banks.

"At the same time, it was also realized that the cerdit policy of the different Federal Reserve banks must be coordinated so that policies adopted in one district would not be harmful to another. More than that, there should be a credit policy for the country as a whole which would take account of general business and credit conditions.

"The direction of this policy is the duty of the board of governors of the Federal Reserve System, which is the central organization located in Washington. The board is aided by other organizations which work closely with it, the Federal Advisory Council and the Federal Open Market Committee.

"Experience has indicated that this power of the board to affect the expansion and contraction of the general supply of credit is of vital importance to the country, since the volume of credit is a factor in determining the course of business, and proper changes in the cost and volume of credit may tend to moderate excessive expansion or contraction of business, or, in other words, may reduce the danger of inflation and deflation.

"The board's ability to influence the volume of credit rests on three important powers: the power to determine discount rates, the power to change reserve requirements, and the power, exercisable through its majority of members on the Federal Open Market Committee, to determine open-market policies."

Food Index Rises 13% Over Last Year

New York, Nov. 7 (AP).—Dun & Bradstreet's Weekly Food Index rose 1 cent from $2.73 to $2.74 for the period ended November 5. The current level is 13.7 per cent higher than for the same period of 1934 and is only slightly under the high of $2.77 established for this year in September.

The advance was caused by sharp seasonal gains in butter and eggs, and moderate expansion in rye, oats, barley, potatoes, molasses and sheep.

December Wheat Sold by Traders

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Nov. 7.—Throwing up the sponge, numerous holders of December delivery of wheat sold out today, and the entire market skidded down, 2⅛ cents in some cases. Chicago wheat prices closed nervous, ⅞@1⅜ cents under yesterday's finish, December 96⅛@⅞, corn ¼@¾ down, December 58⅛@59, oats unchanged to ⅛ off, and provisions unchanged to 15 cents decline.

Kellogg Raises Pay Scale for Six-Hour Day

Only Solution of Unemployment, Says Cereal Manufacturer.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Battle Creek, Mich., Nov. 7.—The six-hour day with wages raised to compensate for the shorter working period is the only solution for the unemployment problem, W. K. Kellogg, the cereal manufacturer, said today in announcing the highest wage scale in the history of the Kellogg Co., of which he is president and founder. The company pioneered in the establishment of the six-hour day five years ago.

The new scale results from an average increase of 12.5 per cent, which applies to all male factory workers and which will be retroactive to October 28. Under it the minimum wage, paid janitors and other unskilled workers, is increased from $4 to $4.50 for a six-hour day, the highest in the company's history, including wages paid for the eight-hour day, which was abolished December 1, 1930.

Wages in the higher brackets, which include most of the company's men employes, are increased in proportion. Wages of women employes were raised two years ago so that their earnings for six hours work equal those previously paid for eight hours.

Average Exceeds $30.

Under the new scale, Mr. Kellogg pointed out, the minimum guaranteed wage for men is $27 for a 38-hour week. But, he added, employes in many departments, including those receiving the minimum, earn an average bonus of 15 to 20 per cent in addition to their guaranteed wages, so that they receive above $30. Employes work for six days a week, except in the winter, when they are on a five-day basis. The plant employs four shifts in each 24-hour period.

In announcing the increase, which came as a surprise to the employes, Mr. Kellogg said he is convinced by the experience of his company and by the "failure of other methods" that the shorter working day without cuts in pay is "the only permanent and workable solution of the unemployment problem." It should increase employment by at least 20 per cent in the plants adopting it, he figured.

"There is no doubt in my mind that the solution of the unemployment problem in the United States lies in spreading employment among more workers without decreasing their buying power through reduced wages," Mr. Kellogg said. "By wages, I refer to the amount in a man's pay envelope—not the hourly rate."

Auto Price Per Hp. $23.70 Less in Decade

New York, Nov. 7 (AP).—The price of automobiles per horsepower has dropped from $31.50 in 1925 to $7.80 in 1935, M. M. Gilman, vice president of the Packard Motor Car Co., told a merchants' association luncheon today. By the pound the price is down to 23 cents. In 1925 it was 41 cents.

This is how the automobile industry, Gilman said, has climbed the economic hills and shifted into high gear, with 1935 its biggest sales year since 1929.

616,000 Per Month Ejected From Trains

Chicago, Nov. 7.—The increase in the number of trespassers on railroad property and illegal train riders throughout the country is proving a serious problem to the railroads, a monthly average of nearly 616,000 trespassers alone having been ejected this summer from trains and premises of 65 of the largest Class 1 carriers, according to a report submitted on Thursday, November 7, by the protective section to the first annual meeting of the Association of American Railroads at the Stevens Hotel.

"Trespassers on railroad property and illegal train riding," the report said, "have been extremely difficult to handle, particularly during the last few years when widespread unemployment has aggravated the situation."

Dr. Bauer Is Forming New Orchestra Here

A musical organization to be known as the Washington Chamber Orchestra is being formed by Dr. Walter Bauer. It will consist of fifteen members of the National Symphony Orchestra, and its function will be the performance of compositions which rank between works scored for large orchestras and those written for small chamber music groups.

Music ranging from classical to modern will be presented. Rehearsals are being scheduled, and it is expected that the first concert will be given about the middle of December. Dr. Bauer's experience as a conductor has been gained in Germany, Italy, France and California. His plans for the new orchestra include productions of chamber opera.

Postal Saving Forgery Admitted by Suspect

Nathaniel Green, colored, 1200 block Tenth street northwest, pleaded guilty and was held under $1,000 bond yesterday when arraigned before United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage on a charge of forging another man's name to two postal savings certificates.

Police said Green had stolen the certificates and cashed one for $100, but fled when a postal clerk remarked on the fingerprint discrepancy when he tried to cash the second one for $50.

New Statue of Liberty Attractions Are Added

More people are visiting the Statue of Liberty each year but the National Park Service, which services Miss Liberty and her big base, is making bid for still greater numbers.

Announcement has been made that the upper elevator landing is now equipped with a semi-relief map identifying the landmarks of New York harbor and that a little theater has been installed inside the statue. In the former, lantern slides summarize the monument's history and its construction.

More than a quarter of a million persons ascended the statue during the travel year ended September 30, the park service announced, an increase of approximately 60,000 over the preceding 12 months.

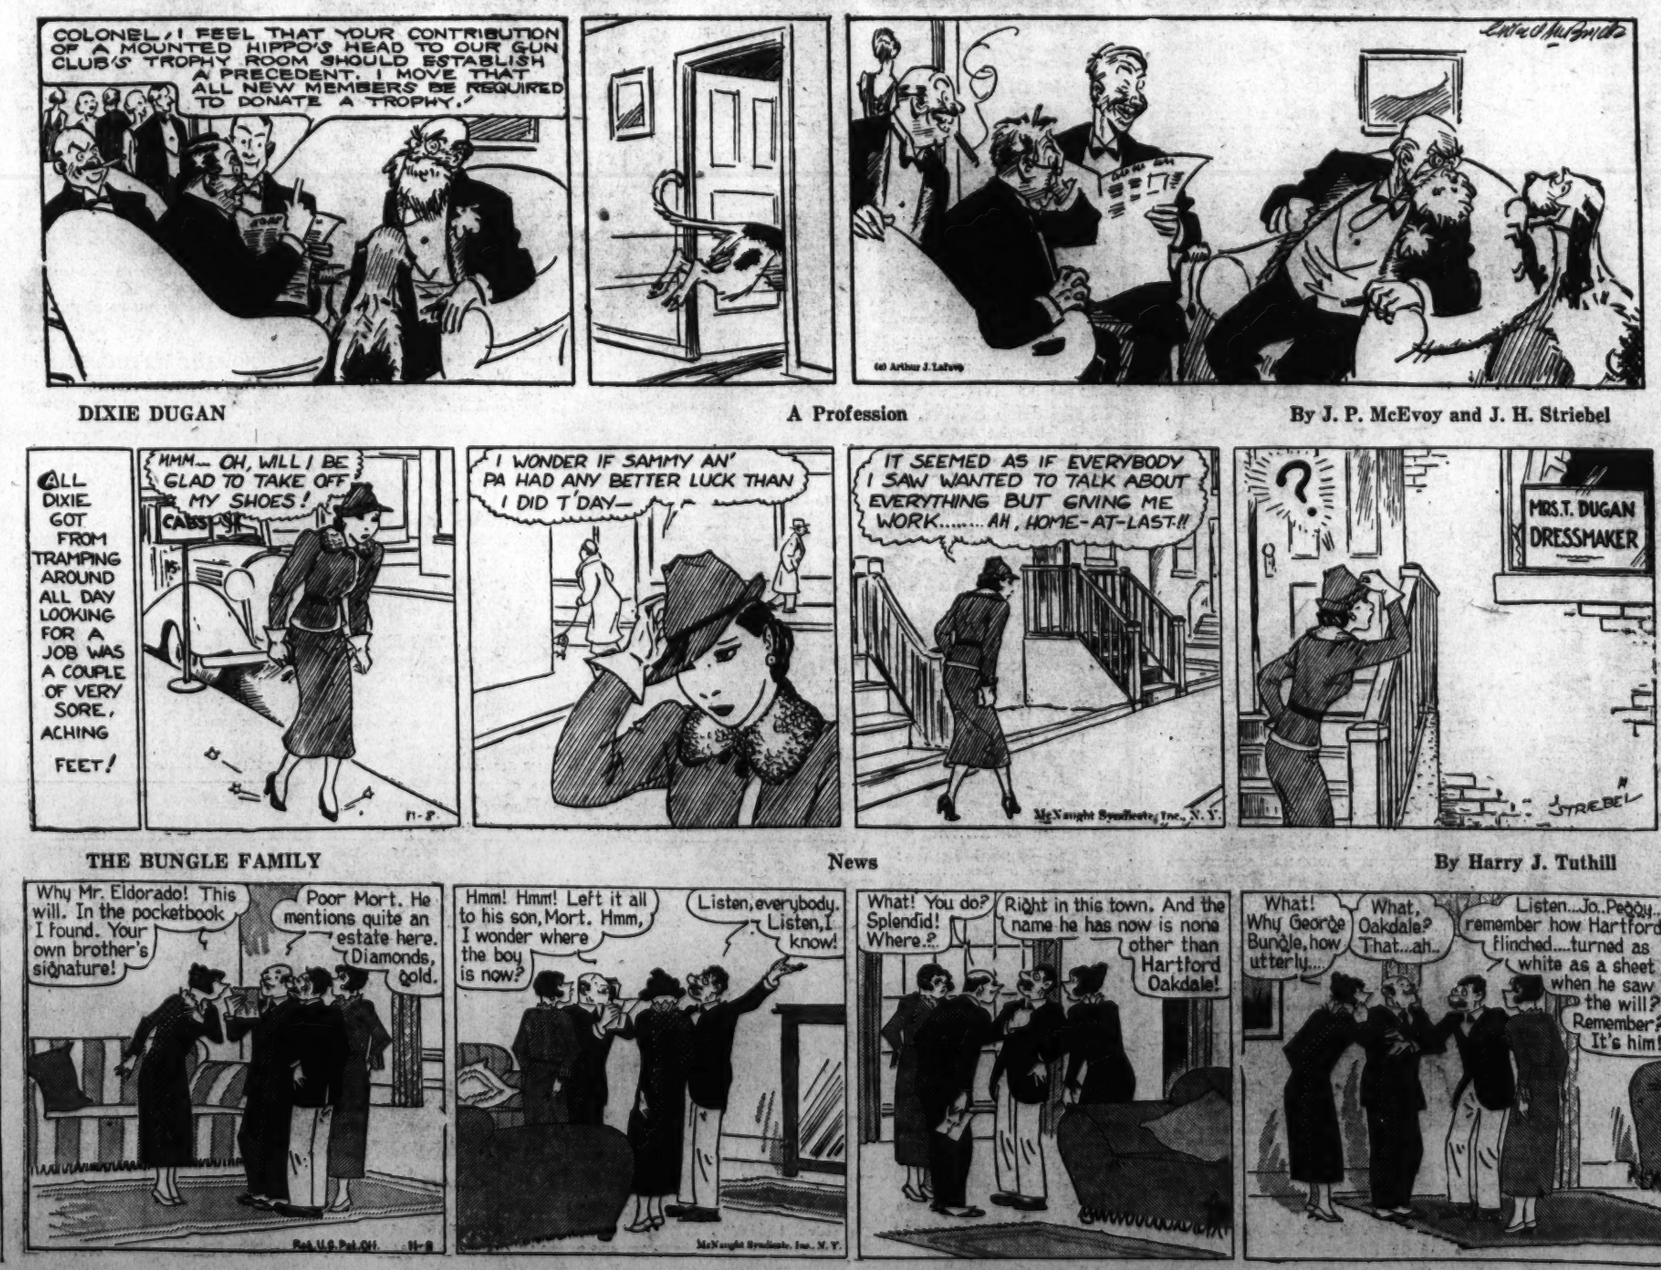
DIXIE DUGAN — A Profession — By J. P. McEvoy and J. H. Striebel



COLONEL, I FEEL THAT YOUR CONTRIBUTION OF A MOUNTED HIPPO'S HEAD TO OUR GUN CLUB'S TROPHY ROOM SHOULD ESTABLISH A PRECEDENT. I MOVE THAT ALL NEW MEMBERS BE REQUIRED TO DONATE A TROPHY.

THE BUNGLE FAMILY — News — By Harry J. Tuthill

ALL DIXIE GOT FROM TRAMPING AROUND ALL DAY LOOKING FOR A JOB WAS A COUPLE OF VERY SORE, ACHING FEET!
HMM... OH, WILL I BE GLAD TO TAKE OFF MY SHOES!
I WONDER IF SAMMY AN' PA HAD ANY BETTER LUCK THAN I DID T'DAY—
IT SEEMED AS IF EVERYBODY I SAW WANTED TO TALK ABOUT EVERYTHING BUT GIVING ME WORK..... AH, HOME-AT-LAST!!
MRS. T. DUGAN DRESSMAKER
Why Mr. Eldorado! This will. In the pocketbook I found. Your own brother's signature!
Poor Mort. He mentions quite an estate here. Diamonds, gold.
Hmm! Hmm! Left it all to his son, Mort. Hmm, I wonder where the boy is now?
Listen, everybody. Listen, I know!
What! You do? Splendid! Where..?
Right in this town. And the name he has now is none other than Hartford Oakdale!
What! Why George Bungle, how utterly....
What, Oakdale? That...ah..
Listen...Jo..Peggy... remember how Hartford flinched....turned as white as a sheet when he saw the will? Remember? It's him!

QUAKE ORPHANS MAKE HOME IN COW BARN.—Without a whimper these four children lived in the manger of a barn after St. Joseph's Orphange at Helena, Mont., was destroyed by earthquake. Thousands of others have sought refuge in homes as make-shift as this as old Mother Earth continues to tremble.

Underwood & Underwood.

FIRST WOMAN AIRLINE PILOT QUITS.—Declaring that discrimination because of her sex by the airplane pilots' union and the Department of Commerce made it impossible for her to continue as co-pilot on the Washington-Detroit run of the Central Airlines, Helen Rickey, first woman airline pilot, has resigned.

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

TARZAN'S MATE GREETS HER MOVIE HE-MAN.—Lupe Velez, petite and fiery screen madcap, gave her great, big handsome husband, Johnny Weissmuller, alias Tarzan, a gleeful welcome on her arrival in New York yesterday from South America. Doesn't look like confirmation of Skolsky's reports from Hollywood, does it?

Harris & Ewing.

ALL LIT UP FOR THE DUKE AND HIS BRIDE.—H. M. S. York, center, flagship of Vice Admiral Sir Mathew R. Best, commander in chief of the British navy in American and West Indies waters, was decked out like this in the Potomac River in honor of the Duke of Gloucester and his bride, Lady Alice Montagu-Douglas-Scott, in London.

AT THE BIER OF HER VICTIM.—Mrs. Daisy Root (right) shown with jail matron as she gazed at the body of her husband, Brenton Root, Memphis business man, during his funeral there yesterday. She is accused of shooting Root in quarrel over other woman.

CHEERFUL CHEERERS.—When members of Tulsa's football squad arrive here for their battle with George Washington, the Oklahoma State Society will honor the grid warriors with a reception and dance at the National Press Club on November 14. Here's the reception committee, left to right, Charlotte Turner, Erwina Owens, Gladys Ragsdale, Ruth Harrison, Gladys Addington and Maxine Harrison.

MIAMIANS HURRY TO CLEAN UP STORM DEBRIS.—The city yacht basin, completely destroyed by Monday's fierce hurricane, is being rapidly restored as scores of workmen are given relief tasks. Photo taken yesterday afternoon shows almost spick and span front yard to greet winter tourists.
